Dear Rabbi Friedman,

I am delighted that you are going to be able to participate in our film and look forward to meeting you on April 26th.

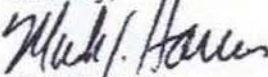

Rick Trank said you wanted to know more specifically what subjects we were going to cover in our interview. Having listened to the three hours of tapes you made for the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, I've been able to choose the areas which are particularly relevant to the film we are making. They are:

1. Your immediate impressions after liberation. The story you tell about finding the children who didn't remember their own names.
2. Being recruited by the Brichah.
3. Your activities for the Brichah. Bringing refugees into Germany from Poland.
4. Going to Poland with Rabbi Bernstein after the pogrom in Kielce.
5. Taking Ben-Gurion to the DP camps at Babenhausen.
6. Meeting Bevin in England with Rabbi Bernstein.
7. Your thoughts about the historical importance for the Jews of the three year period between 1945 and 1948.
8. Your thoughts about the Army's treatment of the DPs, the DPs themselves, and the work of the JDC.

And, of course, any other comments that you feel are relevant to understanding this period.

Per Rick Trank's discussion with your assistant Shelly, it would be appropriate for you to wear a suit and tie for the interview. If you have any questions, please feel free to call either me or Rick, who is the producer of the film. The best place to reach me is at home at (310)455-3814.

Rabbi Herbert Friedman
Wexner Heritage Foundation
551 Madison Avenue
New York, NY 10022

Dear Rabbi Friedman:

Thank you for agreeing to a videotaped interview with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. Your videotape will be an important contribution to our exhibitions, educational programs and scholarly archives.

Please bring with you any Holocaust-era photographs or memorabilia that you might have saved, so that we may show them on the videotape. We would also greatly appreciate it if you would consider donating them to the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. These "object survivors" add an important dimension to your story of survival that will help Museum visitors understand your experience.

Let me confirm our arrangements.

Date and place of interview: It is my understanding that you will arrive in Washington, D.C. at approximately 9:15 a.m., on Tuesday, May 19th. Please take a cab to Interface Video Studios, 1233 20th Street, NW, Washington, D.C., on the Lower Level, where you will meet me at approximately 9:30 a.m. In case of an emergency, my office telephone number is (202) 632-5184, and the telephone number for the studio is (202) 861-0500.

When you arrive at the studio, please tell the receptionist that you are with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum. You will be shown to a comfortable "greenroom" where you will meet with me and with Dr. Berenbaum. We will ask you to sign a Release Form, giving the Museum permission to publicly use the tape. The Museum will provide you with a copy of your interview. The two hour interview will begin at approximately 10:00 a.m.

Interview Process: Many people have asked us to explain the interview process in advance. The purpose of this interview is to learn about you and your personal experience during the Holocaust. The interview takes between one and two hours. The interviewer will ask only a few questions, and you should answer in your own way. Basically, we will ask you to tell us (1) Your name, and where and when you were born; (2) About your childhood and growing up, before the Holocaust (if you were an adult at the time); (3) How you became a member of the armed forces; (4) About your encounters with the Nazi concentration camps; (5) What you did upon your return to the United States.

Reimbursement for expenses: The Museum will reimburse you for those costs agreed upon by you and the Museum Staff. To be reimbursed, you will need to provide the Museum with all receipts for agreed-upon expenses. These should be mailed to Colette Thayer, Oral History Department, at the address shown on the letterhead. The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum can only reimburse you once we have received these receipts.

If you should have any questions or problems at any time, please do not hesitate to call me. I can be reached at (202) 632-5184.

I look forward to meeting you on May 19th.

Sincerely yours,

Holly Snyder

2 INTERVIEWER: Okay, for the record give us
3 your name and a little bit about your early 4 background?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: My name is Herbert
6 Friedman. And my early background is really very 7 simple. I was born in New Haven, Connecticut in 1918.
8 My father had migrated to the States from Vilna, my 9 mother from Riga, good stock. The two of them, they 10 met and married in Connecticut I think it was, and 11 that's where I grew up. I went to high school there, 12 I went to university there, and graduated from Yale in 13 1938. Two brothers, both of whom are still living.
14 A strong, tight, good Jewish family. Conservative
15 congregation in town. Quite modern in those days, men 16 and women sitting together, organ in the congregation.

18 The Rabbi, a wonderful person, himself
19 Vilna-born, but took a Ph.D. at Yale, writing two 20 volumes of the history of the Jews of Russia in 21 English. I mean that was a man, good brain, good 22 human being, and working in this small middle class

1 ordinary congregation, nothing famous about him, but 2 very impressive to me.

3 INTERVIEWER: What was your awareness of 4 the rise of Hitler as you were growing up?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, that's the whole
6 story. The whole story of my life revolves around
7 that question. In college between the years of 1934 8 to '38, formative years, fully cognizant of what was 9 happening, as fully as anybody could be who watched 10 carefully. The argument that people didn't know what 11 was going on in those days has never never seemed 12 valid to me because you could read it in the New York 13 Times. I did. If I did, others did. But at any 14 rate, it bothered me when I looked around '34, '35, 15 '36, in '36 the Nuremberg laws were passed. It was 16 quite clear what the intent was.

17 Hitler's book was out. He had been in 18 jail in Landsberg, he wrote it there back in 1925.
19 The book was available to be read. I read parts of 20 it. It's turgid writing, it's not easy, "Mein Kampf," 21 but never mind you've got the picture. So that I 22 could not understand the silence of the whole American

1 Jewish Community around me. I did understand some of 2 the politics. There was a difference quite clear in 3 those days between the Ost Juden, i.e., the Russian-4 Polish Jews and the German Jews. The American Jewish 5 Committee was in correspondence with people in Berlin
6 who were advising them to be quiet, don't raise a 7 fuss, you'll make it worse, don't organize protests,
8 no, don't listen to Stephen Wise, don't have a parade 9 down Fifth Avenue, and they were attracted by that 10 kind of advice, they were even enchanted by it. It 11 gave them a perfect rationalization.

12 Now, they (the A.J. Committee) were not 13 the only villain in the piece, everybody latched on to 14 that. So I don't want to be misunderstood about the 15 American Jewish Committee only or specifically.

16 The mood was (a) we're not sure of what's 17 happening, (b) it can't be as bad as some people are 18 saying it is, (c) what can we do about it anyhow, and 19 (d) the American Government isn't disturbed, and 20 Franklin Roosevelt is a great friend of the Jews and 21 he isn't upset. Nobody is upset. All of these 22 factors seemed to me to be leading to a dreadful

1 conclusion. So on the specific point of how I was 2 reacting in terms of what I saw around me, I was 3 getting more and more furious, that's a worthwhile 4 word, and frustrated and that was the condition that 5 I felt I was in when I was 19 years old and had 6 graduated from the university, okay.

7 INTERVIEWER: You graduated as a young 8 man?

9 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Young, yes.

10 INTERVIEWER: And then what did you decide 11 to do?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, don't forget we 13 were at the tail end of the Depression, and a man in 14 New York by the name of Samuel Leidesdorf, a big 15 accounting firm, and a major factor in the New York, 16 UJA -- well, it wasn't the UJA then, it was the United 17 Palestine Appeal. Leidesdorf said to me I'll give you 18 a job as an accountant for $25.00 a week if you'll go 19 to Columbia Business School and learn accounting. So, 20 okay, $25.00 a week was a living wage for a single 21 man, and I went to Columbia Graduate School of 22 Business, stayed one year, couldn't stand it for

1 another day, couldn't dream of myself as being an 2 accountant, so I quit.

3 INTERVIEWER: $25.00 --

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: A week.

5 INTERVIEWER: -- was the equivalent today 6 of what?

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, gosh, I don't know.
8 30 times that amount, $700.00, $800.00 a week. A very 9 good job.

10 INTERVIEWER: So it was a nice starting 11 salary?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, yes, a nice starting 13 salary, perfectly acceptable. Tuition was $450.00 at 14 Yale. Today it's $23,500.00. So there I was, I was 15 at the end, I owed money to Yale, I owed money to 16 Columbia and it's now 1939, the war has not yet broken 17 out in Europe but it's imminent, and America is in a 18 totally isolationist mood, no thought of participating 19 in it. Roosevelt was jockeying like mad to give the 20 British some support and so he was making these funny 21 deals called lend/lease, we will lend you some of our 22 destroyers on lease, you will pay us rent for our

1 destroyers, but we're not going to get into your war.
2 It was really so ambivalent and so confused and so
3 costly in the long run.

4 At any rate my personal requirements were 5 that I had better go and get a job. So I went back to 6 New Haven and got a job in a factory working at a 7 sewing machine making blankets. I worked two shifts, 8 16 hours a day, and I earned enough money to pay back 9 all the debts. And I also did the most important 10 thing at that stage in my life, I decided what I 11 really wanted to do.

12 INTERVIEWER: Which was?

13 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I tried to figure out 14 during all those mindless hours at the machine where 15 all you're trying to do is keep your hand away from 16 the needle while you're feeding cloth through and it's 17 robot work, and I said why should I continue being so 18 frustrated. If the American Jewish Community isn't 19 awake why don't I try to awaken them, but how do you
20 do that. That's when I decided that I would become a 21 rabbi, not because of any theological sudden insights, 22 I had no epiphanies, I had no -- I conceived of myself

1 really as a civil servant. And if I had a platform
2 from which to speak I would use that platform to try 3 to wake people up. It was sort of simplistic, very 4 idealistic, but satisfying to me. On the other hand, 5 again I felt I'm stopping myself for at least three 6 years of more study from getting into any action mode
7 and yet I'd better do that or else I'll be frustrated 8 the rest of my life.

9 So I finished with the factory, backed 10 off, went to rabbinical seminary called The Jewish 11 Institute of Religion, headed by Stephen Wise in New 12 York, and we did four year's worth of work in three, 13 no summer vacations, no nothing, 11-1/2 months you 14 worked, two weeks off, and kept going that way.

15 INTERVIEWER: What was the mood in 16 rabbinical school, were students preparing for a 17 career, was there a sense of --

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, Wise being the 19 person he was and focused the way he was, every one of 20 the students in the school became acutely sensitized
21 to the current events around us. So, sure, everybody 22 was preparing for a career, you needed to get a pulpit

1 or a job somewhere to earn your living, but an 2 ideology was developing among this group different 3 from the Hebrew Union College out in Cincinnati. The 4 J.I.R. graduated about 220 reform rabbis, but reform 5 rabbis of a totally different kind than Cincinnati was 6 producing.

7 I sat for all those years next to a fellow 8 by the name of Usher Kirschblum who later became the 9 Chairman of the Mizrahi Zionist Organization, and he 10 sat with his kippa and I sat without a kippa and the 11 whole faculty liked it that way and Wise liked it that 12 way, and the dean, Henry Slonimsky liked it that way.
13 It was a school in which clal yisrael or pluralism or 14 whatever word you want to use, which is so fashionable 15 today, was really being practiced in the '30s and 16 '40s, the only school in which it was being carried 17 out as a definite ideological objective, and every 18 student picked it up.

19 INTERVIEWER: Tell us a little bit about 20 Stephen Wise, his school, what was his role in this, 21 what was his role in the American Jewish Community at 22 that time?

1 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, his role in the 2 American Jewish Community was superb. He was the 3 leader of the protest, the ceaseless effort to try to 4 persuade Roosevelt, to whom he had automatic access, 5 Rabbi Stephen Wise was acceptable to Roosevelt at 6 request, and saw him frequently. He failed to 7 convince him of anything, but Wise was the pusher,
8 Wise was the aggressor seeking to have a large protest
9 meeting in Madison Square Garden, and we'll get 25,000 10 people there or 20,000 whatever the Garden holds. And 11 he filled it every time, talking about the fact we 12 must do something. He sounded -- he was the only one 13 who sounded the toxin, the call, he was the bugle.
14 Almost no response except in those of us who were 15 listening to him very very carefully and very closely.
16 I adored him, I admired him, I respected him.

17 The personal impact used to come on 18 Thursday mornings. Thursday morning he had a class
19 called problems of the ministry. A big round table, 20 seminar table, 18, 12 students around the table. We 21 thought problems of the ministry meant how do you 22 conduct a wedding how do you conduct a funeral?

1 Nothing of the sort. Wise would go into his pocket, 2 he would take out the latest telegram that he had 3 gotten from the World Jewish Congress, Gerhardt 4 Riegner in Geneva, concerning the slaughter going on.
5 Not only was he a key player in the World Jewish 6 Congress but he also started the American Jewish 7 Congress. He believed in Democracy and he had hoped 8 that those organizations would really be democratic in 9 the sense that every member would vote for its 10 officers. It never happened that way in practice, 11 but in theory it was at that time the most democratic,
12 and still to this day the most liberal organization I 13 think in existence in the panoply of our alphabet 14 soup.

15 So he would take the telegram out and tell 16 us what was the latest stuff going on in Europe in 17 this camp or that camp, or this ghetto or another.

18 INTERVIEWER: So you were with him in the 19 period of '39 through --

20 RABBI FRIEDMAN: '39 to '43. I left in 21 '43. I graduated, I went out to Denver to take a --

22 INTERVIEWER: Did you know of the 1 existence of Riegner telegram?

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Sure. We students knew
3 it. He read it to us.

4 INTERVIEWER: And what was the its impact?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: On us?

6 INTERVIEWER: Yes.

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Devastating and 8 confirming. It confirmed us in our desire, because I 9 wasn't the only one who felt this frustrated and who 10 wanted to get out there and try to wake up the Jews -- 11 so we were getting confirmation to our own personal 12 feelings from him. And I think he felt that if he was 13 failing to arouse the street, he was at least 14 succeeding in arousing us. That was, I think, the 15 greater of two contributions which he made.

16 And we were champing at the bit. And so 17 many of us in those classes spent the one year which 18 the Army required of us to go and be a rabbinical 19 intern, that is by medical metaphor. The army said to 20 young doctors - You graduated medical school, now be 21 an intern in the hospital for a year, and then we will 22 take you into the Army and we'll commission you as a

1 medical officer. The same with clergymen., go out, 2 get your congregational experience, (what good that 3 was going to do you in the Army I have no idea,) but 4 that was their bureaucracy. And so each of us was 5 impatient to get out, get the congregational job, 6 spend the year and then get into the chaplaincy.

7 INTERVIEWER: Let me focus for a moment on 8 the Riegner telegram. Do you remember when you heard
9 the Riegner telegram --

10 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, it was in '42.

11 INTERVIEWER: -- August of '42?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Aug. '42. I didn't 13 remember which month exactly. Well, so then it would 14 have been a week or two weeks thereafter. Remember I 15 said school was continuous, there were no summer
16 vacations. So let's call it -- yes, it was before 17 Rosh Hashanah. Yes I remember it now. So I can't 18 tell you the exact date, but we all used it in sermons 19 that we made. I used it. I remember I used it. But 20 who was listening to us. I mean we didn't make any 21 ripples. Students make any ripples out in the big 22 world? And if you were a student at -- where was I?

1 It was a place in Virginia. So you're talking to one 2 group of people and you're reading this telegram to 3 them and you're saying wake up, wake up. The impact 4 was quite limited, quite personal.

5 And, you know, the Riegner telegram of 6 1942 became such a big sensation later as proof that 7 we had evidence and everybody chose to bury it. Wyman
8 in his book talks about the fact that the State 9 Department didn't want it transmitted to anybody, they 10 wanted it just kept secret. They were afraid of what 11 impact it would make and so indeed it didn't make any 12 for a long time.

13 But Wise had it. We his students had it.
14 We tried to get it out. I don't know when it hit the 15 press.

16 INTERVIEWER: How did Wise see his own
17 role?

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I don't think he stood 19 still long enough to see his own role. He was in 20 constant motion. He was in furious motion. And the 21 fact that he would meet us every Thursday morning at 22 11:00 o'clock week after week after week, year after

1 year meant that that was a holy moment for him, a 2 crucial moment. If you can transmit something to your 3 students then at least your own mortality becomes less 4 important. If you can't transmit anything to anybody
5 and it's all bottled up in you, then it's dreadful 6 that you are going to die with that. But he never had 7 a sense of dying. He was vigorous and always moving,
8 speaking out heedlessly. He was the prime spokesman 9 to the non-Jewish world not just to the Jewish world.

10 In the first half of the 20th century
11 every clergyman in this country knew the name of Rabbi 12 Stephen Wise. And so his satisfactions came from 13 that. Toward the end he developed cancer in the 14 throat and died in '49 never having set foot on the 15 sovereign soil of the State of Israel. At the very 16 end I remember seeing him once and he said that was 17 the greatest tragedy of his life. He spent his whole 18 life working for the cause of Zionism and when it 19 reached its fruition he never had the joy and the 20 glory of setting foot on that soil.

21 INTERVIEWER: Let's go back to '42.

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

1 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

2 INTERVIEWER: You then finished -- this 3 was the Jewish Institute of Religion?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Jewish Institute of 5 Religion in New York. After Wise died, I think it was 6 still Nelson Glueck who was the president out in 7 Cincinnati, came and pushed for the merger. Some of 8 us fought against the merger. We had a different 9 conception of what the reform movement was than they 10 did. Rabbi Morton Berman of Chicago, I remember, and 11 Rabbi Philip Bernstein of Rochester, those were two of 12 my very close friends. They were a few years ahead of 13 me, a few years older than I was, but still we became 14 very friendly. We fought the merger unsuccessfully.
15 With Wise dead and no fund-raising going on -- he was 16 the prime fund-raiser, he kept the school alive. So 17 the merger took place.

18 We scattered. I left. I was graduated 19 and went out to Denver in August '43. Wise said to 20 me, you go to Denver. Wise used to think that if he 21 could place a man in a pulpit somewhere that he would 22 then have a right to go to that man and to do some

1 fund-raising in that congregation in support of the 2 alma mater, the school you went to. So he was always 3 desperately seeking good congregational placements.
4 Well, this was a congregation out there that had a 5 thousand family memberships in 1943. The congregation
6 was older than the State of Colorado.

7 Colorado came into the Union in 1876,
8 called the Centennial State. The congregation was 9 established in 1874. It was started by Simon
10 Guggenheim, later Senator Guggenheim, American Mining 11 and Smelting Company, a powerful, big German classical 12 reform leader. So Wise pushed me as, I guess one of 13 his favorite sons, into that congregation. Stay there 14 and we'll always then have a foot in the door.

15 INTERVIEWER: You went out to Denver, what 16 happened then?

17 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, I had a lovely year
18 there, fighting hard with the congregation. Their 19 previous rabbi, also named Friedman, (William S.), had 20 been there for 50 years and taught then anti-Zionism, 21 anti-Hebrew, anti-Bar Mitzvah, anti-Oriental 22 ceremonials like putting on a hat, etcetera, etcetera.

1 50 years, two generations, I couldn't dream of 2 upsetting that in one year, but I got close to it. I
3 split the congregation. I said why don't you guys go
4 off and be homogeneous in your anti-Zionism, I'm going
5 to take this congregation and turn it around. If you
6 stay, you're going to be listening to my ideological 7 stuff which is going to irritate you. And your 8 oppositional presence out there in front is going to 9 irritate me, so take a Sefer Torah and goodbye.

10 Today Denver has two big, big strong
11 reform temples. The anti group has long since come 12 back. So I think I did a good thing. That was my one 13 year. And then I went to the Army.

14 INTERVIEWER: Let's talk for a little bit 15 about the American Jewish Community at that point from 16 the vantage point of Denver. You've already mentioned 17 one division between Zionism and non Zionism.

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes.

19 INTERVIEWER: And you've mentioned a 20 second division between an activism that Wise was 21 pushing for in a much more conservative environment of 22 "don't rock the boat" or something like that. How did

1 you experience the division of the Denver Jewish 2 Community during the year 1943 which after all was the 3 height of the holocaust?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I'm not sure what you
5 mean by "how did I experience the division." I 6 exacerbated the division inside the temple by 7 splitting it. And on the basis of this ideological 8 definition of Zionism as being compatible with 9 reformed Judaism, '43 was the crucial year in which 10 the Central Conference of American Rabbis passed a 11 vote on the resolution "Is reform Judaism compatible 12 with Zionism?" That's the way the resolution was 13 framed and the votes were taken, roll-call vote, name 14 by name by name by name. You had to stand up, it was 15 not a secret ballot. The vote was three to one in 16 favor of that resolution: 300 to 100. And the 100 17 men went off and formed the American Council for 18 Judaism, the anti-Zionist organization. The 300 guys 19 controlled the future growth of the reform movement.

20 But it wasn't only on the Zionist issue.
21 It was also on the issue of ritual. The old classical 22 line was - what is a Bar Mitzvah? What a silly,

1 stupid thing. The boy isn't a man at the age of 13.
2 We do not have Bar Mitzvahs, my old members said.
3 Well, that was the practice out at N.U.C. in 4 Cincinnati. That's the way those graduates were being 5 taught. Our Stephen Wise graduates from J.I.R. were 6 pushing for greater ritual observance, so we were 7 accused of being Orthodox. Well, in order to validate 8 that accusation which I thought was the ironic way to 9 handle the whole thing, my best rabbinical friend in 10 town was Manuel Lederman, the leading Orthodox rabbi 11 in town.

12 It used to delight my supporters when they 13 would see the two of us walking down the street 14 together. It used to infuriate my enemies and gave 15 them visible proof that I was a traitor to the reform 16 movement. We were friends all our lives. And his 17 son, Paul, who lives in Jerusalem now, I still see 18 once in a while.

19 INTERVIEWER: In Denver was there a move 20 at that point for political activism on behalf of the 21 European Jews?

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, there was a move on

1 behalf of Zionism. You know the accusation which is 2 made against Ben Gurion himself and all the 3 Palestinian-centered Zionist officials; namely, that 4 they didn't pay much attention to the Holocaust, they 5 didn't express their outrage at it, they didn't do
6 very much except through the Haganah, the military arm 7 of the Jewish Agency which tried to do something. The 8 theories are that the Zionist leaders felt that the 9 battle over saving Jewish life in Europe was lost, but 10 that the battle for creating a state which would 11 harbor whoever would be left alive had yet to be won.
12 So of the two battles, why fight the one which is 13 already hopeless, you must fight the one which 14 contains the hope for the future.

15 Now that was pretty much Ben Gurion's 16 philosophy. We talked about it many times and he 17 wasn't cold, he wasn't calloused, his heart was as 18 wounded as everybody's was, but he was an earnestly 19 practical and pragmatic person. And he said I've got 20 to concentrate on Zionism and building the state. I 21 want a Jewish army. He was fighting for that as part 22 of the Allied armies in order to stake a claim

1 afterwards to be able to sit at the peace table.

2 INTERVIEWER: Which period of time did you
3 first meet Ben Gurion?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, I first met him in 5 Paris in '45. So in '43 I didn't yet know him, but I 6 knew the Zionist concept that concentrated instead on 7 trying to persuade the as yet unconvinced American 8 Jewish public that that's where the future lay. 1943 9 was only a year after the Biltmore Resolution was 10 passed. The Zionists themselves never dared use the 11 word "state" until 1942. They were also groping their 12 way toward the definition of their own movement.
13 Courage finally prevailed. The Zionist Organization
14 held a big conference at the Biltmore Hotel, (hence 15 the name of the resolution). Ben Gurion stood up and 16 said we must pass a resolution stating clearly that we 17 are trying to create a country, a state. This was 18 quite revolutionary in '42.

19 In '43 in Denver we were all arguing about 20 that. And I was preaching sermon after sermon about 21 state and army, army and state, independence and 22 sovereignty, these are the only answers to 1 powerlessness. We're powerless without these 2 instuments.

3 INTERVIEWER: And why did you decide to 4 leave Denver and join the Army?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well because the fight
6 against Hitler was there. I mean the point is that I
7 could continue arguing with those Jews in Denver, 8 making tremendous strides with them and I knew I would 9 win the fight or history would win the fight. But I
10 wanted to be where the history was being made. So 365 11 days to the day, this prisoner (having scratched the 12 nail on the cement wall of the cell) having completed 13 his internship as required, enlisted in the Army. My 14 old friend Rabbi Philip Bernstein, was the Executive 15 Secretary of the Chaplaincy Commission of the Jewish 16 Welfare Board. They certified to the Army that this 17 rabbi was duly ordained, sane and in good health and 18 they recommended that I be commissioned as First 19 Lieutenant in the Chaplaincy Corps. I think the pay 20 was $1,000.00 a month.

21 INTERVIEWER: That was $1,000.00 a month?

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes.

1 INTERVIEWER: $12,000.00 a year?

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Sure.

3 INTERVIEWER: In '45?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Sure. What do you think 5 I was being paid in the congregation? $75.00 a week, 6 $3,600.00 a year. So Army pay was fabulous, it was 7 great. Once inducted, you had to go through 8 chaplaincy school at Fort Devens in Massachusetts.
9 Then I was assigned to an infantry training regiment in 10 Camp Blanding in Florida. And then you were assigned 11 overseas. We sailed from Boston and were put into a 12 replacement depot up in Belgium in a little town
13 called Namur. And then I was assigned to the 9th
14 Infantry Division which was part of the Third Army 15 under the command of General George Patton.

16 The fighting was over in Germany. We were 17 in this depot in Belgium. I mentioned Namur. I have 18 to tell you a story. This was a small town in Belgium 19 and we were in a big camp outside of town, thousands 20 of officers being shuffled around and the paperwork 21 taking weeks before everybody got sorted out. So one 22 day I was walking through this little village, hardly

1 more than a village, and I saw a store front with a 2 Magen David on the window.

3 INTERVIEWER: Jewish star?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes. A Star of David,
5 yes. Well, okay, wow, what's this! I went past it a 6 number of times until one day I saw that it was open 7 and there were people inside. I walked in and in the 8 second room, in the back, visible to the street, I
9 realized that this was a synagogue. There was a 10 little Ark and over the Ark there was a picture of a 11 Catholic priest with a collar and no name, no 12 designation. So I found one old man there who was 13 sort of the caretaker and he told me the story.

14 Well, said the shamash, his name is Father 15 Andre and we respect him because he saved so many 16 Jewish lives. The Gestapo headquarters in Namur was 17 in a building that was right next to the church, and 18 in the back of the church was where the priest was 19 living and he had his bedroom and he had a kitchen, 20 and the Gestapo officers, many of whom were Catholic, 21 (as was half the population of Germany) and many of 22 whom used to come to sit and drink wine with the

1 priest. The priest figured that his bedroom next door
2 to this kitchen was the safest place to hide Jews. He 3 was one of the network of an underground railroad that 4 was passing Jews through town trying to get them to 5 the ultimate safest destination which was Portugal, a 6 neutral country, so the movement was always southward.

7 Two Jews, four Jews in his bed, under his 8 bed, in the big wardrobe. Four Gestapo officers, five 9 meters, fifteen feet away. Risky! I mean that is the 10 material that moving pictures are made out of. Not a 11 single Jew was caught. Crazy things would happen.
12 Four kids would show up at the back door. He had to 13 excuse himself, run, take them, push them under the 14 bed, go back to the Gestapo guys. Never a problem, 15 never a failure, never a death. Hundreds of Jews were 16 saved going through his bedroom. When it was all over 17 -- the few remaining Jews in town wanted to give him 18 a present so they bought him a new bed to replace his 19 bed which had gotten so badly smashed in, although he 20 had never slept in it for two years. And they put his 21 picture up over the Ark.

22 And that was the first time I ever learned

1 about Chasidei Umot Ha-olam, the righteous Gentiles of 2 the world. And more and more today we're beginning to 3 hear about them, and he was one.

4 INTERVIEWER: What did you know of the 5 Holocaust in '43, '44, '45?

6 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Auschwitz was at its 7 height in '44 and '45, trains bringing thousands per 8 day from all over Europe. Treblinka was 70 km. from 9 Warsaw, receiving 7-8,000 per day from the Warsaw
10 Ghetto. Treblinka was at its height '42, and early 11 '43. Sobibor, Maidanak, all of them. '43, '44, '45, 12 they were at the height of production. So when you 13 say what did I know about it, I knew those facts. I 14 knew the facts that the Americans had refused and the 15 British had refused bombing Auschwitz even though both 16 Air Forces were over-flying Auschwitz on the way to 17 the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania. And they were 18 using the excuse that they did not want to jeopardize 19 Allied equipment and manpower. But it was an excuse, 20 they were already flying over Auschwitz; they could 21 have bombed the death factory.

22 This just increased the sense of 1 powerlessness. We couldn't convince anybody so we 2 were going to have to take fate into our own hands.

3 And this required a firm determination to get the 4 state and get back into a situation of power over our 5 own destiny. But there was nothing that could be done 6 about it, at the moment, except prepare for the 7 ultimate battle, which finally came three years later, 8 in 1948.

9 INTERVIEWER: You were a chaplain, when 10 did you first encounter the survivors of the 11 Holocaust?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Dachau was liberated. I
13 say Dachau because the Ninth Infantry division was 14 down in southern Germany. We were at that time posted 15 in a little town called Wasserburg am Inn which was 16 between Munich and Salzburg. Dachau was right outside 17 of Munich. Dachau was liberated by the 42nd Division, 18 I would say about May of '45.

19 INTERVIEWER: April 29th.

20 RABBI FRIEDMAN: April 29th, okay. It's 21 good to have a real expert here. Now, the first 22 encounter I had with refugees was shortly thereafter,

1 some matter of days or weeks. From Munich south, all
2 through Bavaria were a whole network of underground 3 German factories that were producing goods for the 4 Army, everything from simple bullets to very 5 complicated howitzers. It was all done with slave 6 labor. These people emerged above ground. They were 7 wandering around the roads and forests and the lakes.
8 It's heavily wooded area, and heavily infiltrated with 9 lots of small lakes.

10 I used to take trucks out of the motor 11 pool, and start driving on these small country roads 12 looking for people and determining that they were 13 Jews. The process is very simple, you just drop their 14 trousers and that's that. And putting them into the 15 trucks and trying to find a place where I could gather 16 them and (a) let them be safe, and (b) get some food 17 in and get some DDT powder and get some simple 18 medicines. Penicillin had just been invented but it 19 was ferociously expensive and available only for 20 curing syphilis.

21 I remember an episode where we were 22 driving around and we had about a half load of people

1 when we saw two children on the side of the road. I
2 jumped out and I wanted to talk to the children. You
3 talk to them in a combination of German or Yiddish or 4 Hebrew. You find one of those three languages would 5 work. But the kids were frightened. They saw a 6 soldier in a uniform and they started to run across 7 the field, a little boy and a little girl, holding 8 hands, running and stumbling.

9 I didn't want to threaten them by running 10 faster than they were, so I kind of followed them and 11 they were gasping and they were crying, and finally 12 they ran out of steam and they stopped, and so I 13 stopped. After I got my arms around them, and tried 14 to explain to them that I was a Jewish soldier and I 15 pointed to the chaplain's insignia on my uniform which 16 contained a Star of David and the two tablets of the 17 Ten Commandments, they quieted down. I scooped up the 18 two kids, they were about 10 or 11 years old, and put 19 them in the truck.

20 But the fear was so palpable. And 21 whatever experience they had been through was so 22 utterly real that they were shocked out of any

1 knowledge of their own names, where they came from,
2 what they were doing there. It was like total
3 amnesia. It was the anonymity of those two survivors, 4 they didn't know who they were, what happened to them, 5 where they came from, that really impacted me. I was 6 shocked.

7 I find it hard to comprehend six million
8 victims and I don't understand what one and a half 9 million dead children mean, but two children that's 10 real, that's real. And I said to myself, every single 11 one such as these, we have to try to save and rescue.
12 What's dead is dead. It's all gone. It's ashes, and 13 it's blown off in the wind. But what's living we 14 can't leave wandering around Europe. And that's what 15 I did for the next two and a half years. So I still 16 remember it. That was the first encounter.

17 And when the truck was full with 50 or so 18 people, then the trick was to find some structure with 19 four walls and a roof. So I remember once we found a 20 barn that had three walls, and once we found an 21 abandoned airfield with a hangar. You would find 22 something. I remember once I found a city hall in a

1 small German town. It was a beautiful building in 2 perfect shape, fully occupied by German clerks, all 3 busy working at the typewriters, and I said hey this 4 is a great building.

5 Well, a Colt .45 is a heavy piece of 6 equipment. You turn it around and hit the butt on the 7 table and you can break the table. So a few knocks
8 like that got the attention of the Burgermeister. It 9 was a city hall so he's there, upstairs, second floor.
10 And in nice German I told him this house was now 11 beschlagenamt, this was requisitioned in the name of 12 the United States Army. I had no more authority to 13 do, than you would have, but the uniform was its own 14 authority and the .45 was it's own authority. So I
15 said that I wanted this place empty and I wanted it
16 clean and I wanted it tomorrow morning, with everybody
17 out, because I am bringing in some Fluchtlinge, 18 refugees. He didn't have to know who they were. And,
19 you know, sure enough tomorrow morning it was clean, 20 it was empty, it was available, it was warm. He had 21 some wood in the back for a wood stove, and 50 Jews 22 had a place. This was called a camp. I mean you've

1 got to designate it. You've got a location for it,
2 you give it a name, it's got a population. It becomes 3 another D.P. (Displaced Person) camp.

4 And to cut a long story short, by the time
5 we got all through collecting Jews on German soil, and 6 bringing in others from eastern Europe, there were 64
7 locations in Germany, another six or eight in Austria, 8 and even two in Italy. All together, under the 9 jurisdiction of the American Army and the safety of 10 the American flag there were living a quarter of a 11 million Jewish survivors.

12 The starting number that I was aware of 13 when Dachau was liberated, was 35,000 Jews alive on 14 German soil either in camp, liberated from camps or 15 from slave labor in German factories, 35,000. That 16 number was determined by a fellow chaplain named 17 Abraham Klausner, who was with the forces that got 18 into Dachau right after the camp was liberated.

19 INTERVIEWER: You used the word "we," who 20 is we? So far you've only described operating really 21 on your own intuition.

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes.

1 INTERVIEWER: When did it get organized?

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay. It got organized
3 somewhere in a higher echelon, unbeknownst to me, 4 probably three or four years earlier, because the 5 Haganah organized it and it was called Aliyah Bet.
6 Aliyah Bet meant --

7 INTERVIEWER: Haganah was?

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Haganah was the military 9 arm of the Jewish Agency, the underground Jewish self-10 government while the British were in mandatory control
11 of Palestine. You had an underground government 12 administering the affairs of the population, 600,000
13 Jews in the Yishuv, and that underground government
14 had an underground army. At its height the Haganah 15 had about 25,000 men and women. Just so you should 16 compare it to the other two underground organizations, 17 the Irgun which was Begin's organization had about 18 3,000 people, and the Stern Gang, which was Shamir's 19 organization had about 300 people. So that gives you 20 a scale.

21 Now, the Haganah organized two departments
22 to work outside of Palestine. One was called Aliyah

1 Bet, which obviously was different, from Aliyah Aleph.
2 Aliyah means migration to Israel or Palestine. Aleph
3 is number 1, Bet is number 2. Number 1 is legitimate, 4 legal. It's what the British permitted. The British 5 permitted 1,500 Jews per month to receive certificates 6 to enter Palestine. Well, at 1,500 a month we were 7 going to be many, many, many decades cleaning up the 8 quarter-million D.P.'s in Europe.
9 Therefore Aliyah Bet, method number 2, 10 illegal, was organized. This involved Jews from 11 Palestine going into Europe, organizing groups of 12 refugees, sending ships in to try to take these people 13 to Palestine against the wishes of the British or 14 anybody else who might try to stop them, including the 15 Nazis. Aliyah Bet started even while the war was 16 going on. They were taking ships out of a Rumanian 17 port, Constanza on the Black Sea, in '41, and in '42.
18 These were efforts that were so desperate and so 19 futile, a few hundred here, a few hundred there, and 20 so sad in the ending because many of those ships sunk, 21 many of the people drowned. But many thousand also 22 got through.

1 So that was the start of the whole thing.
2 When the war ended in '45 the Haganah personnel came 3 in to Europe in force, maybe as many as 100, and it
4 might have been 150, I'm never sure of the whole 5 number, and they recruited me. That's the "we."

6 INTERVIEWER: Well, how did they recruit 7 you?

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, it's a crazy story.
9 I was in a little town down in Bavaria called Bad Tolz 10 and the telephone rang and there was a lady on the 11 phone, and I was 27 years old, unmarried, and this 12 lady invites me to come to see her in her hotel room 13 in the Royal Monceau Hotel in Paris. So wouldn't you 14 go, I mean under those conditions?

15 When we finally met face to face I was 16 quickly disabused of all such ulterior motives on my 17 part and we got back to good old idealism. She said 18 that she had heard what I was doing in Bavaria with my 19 trucks and she wanted me to come to meet her and she 20 wanted me to -- she wanted to talk to me. That was 21 the phone conversation. I agreed. I got orders and 22 went to Paris a few days later.

1 The British flag was hanging from the 2 front of that hotel. It was right near the Etoile, on 3 Avenue Hoche. I wondered what the British flag was 4 doing on this hotel? She answered the door, keeping 5 me waiting out in the hall. She asked, "Will you work 6 for us?" Will you work for us? Who is us? She 7 replied: "the Haganah".

8 Now, sometimes in life you make decisions
9 on the basis of careful evaluation of all the facts 10 involved. There were no facts here and you had to 11 operate purely on intuition. Something told me to say 12 yes and I said yes and it changed my life.

13 I was still out in the hall, but I can see 14 that she went to the door at the far end of the living 15 room. A short white-haired man came out, walking 16 toward me. She said to him, "Friedman will work for 17 us." He came over, shook hands with me, said thank 18 you, turns around and walked back to his room. I 19 didn't see him again until a year later. She never 20 introduced him to I had no idea who he was. She then 21 said, "That's Mr. David Ben Gurion", and I said, "Who 22 is he?" I didn't connect in my mind that this was the

1 Ben Gurion who was the head of the Jewish Agency. He 2 was supposed to be in Jerusalem or in jail in Rhodesia 3 somewhere where they scooped up everybody when the 4 British did that Black Shabbat. No, no she said,
5 that's Mr. Ben Gurion. I asked what he was doing here
6 in a British hotel? And she said: "Did you never read 7 Poe?" The purloined letter is right under your nose, 8 and that's the safest place to put it. Beautiful.

9 Then she invited me in, sat me down and 10 gave me a cup of coffee while I took off my coat, and 11 asked to what had I committed myself? She said that 12 what I had been doing down in the woods in southern 13 Bavaria was fine, but now they needed me for a bigger 14 assignment. You've got to go to Berlin, get yourself 15 settled there. Find a big house, which is almost 16 impossible in that totally bombed city, with a 17 backyard large enough to hold six trucks. Then get 18 enough gas tickets for a year. You're going to run 19 the route from Stettin, way up on the Polish border, 20 north almost up to the Baltic, down to Berlin. I said
21 that's all Russian territory.

22 Berlin is an island in the middle of the

1 Russian zone of Germany. She said that's right. I
2 said we're supposed to run trucks across the Polish-
3 Russian border and drive 150 miles through the Russian 4 zone, to Berlin. She said that's it, that's what 5 you're going to do. I said that's what I'm going to 6 do. She said well, we'll send you some soldiers from 7 the Palestine Brigade who are on bivouac right now in 8 Belgium. The British don't want them to go back to 9 Palestine. These were 30,000 guys, well armed and 10 well experienced in infantry warfare, whom the British 11 by no means wanted to allow in Palestine. The British 12 were keeping them in Belgium doing nothing. We will 13 send you 12 fellows and they'll ride the trucks with 14 you back and forth.

15 INTERVIEWER: Let me see if I understand 16 this for a moment. You are at this point a soldier in 17 the United States Army?

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: A captain in the United 19 States Army, yes sir.

20 INTERVIEWER: So how do you move to Berlin 21 and what do you do?

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: When I started to explain

1 to her the difficulties involved in carrying out her
2 orders, she said I don't care how you do it, it's not 3 my business, you get yourself transferred to Berlin.
4 If you don't know any of the ropes of your own Army by 5 now, then what good are you going to be to us. I mean
6 she was sort of mocking even. She said don't bother
7 me with such details. I was supposed to get myself 8 transferred to Berlin Headquarters Command. There was 9 one stroke of luck. There was a chaplain occupying 10 that post who was ready to be de-mobilized and go back 11 to the U.S. His name was Joseph Shubow, an Orthodox 12 Rabbi from Boston. So I put in a request to take his 13 place, because we didn't need a chaplain in the 9th 14 Infantry Division anymore. We needed somebody up in 15 Berlin Headquarters Command. Personnel department
16 agreed, so I was officially transferred to Berlin.

17 Now, as far as a house is concerned, we 18 found in Dahlem, a very lovely residential section of 19 Berlin, a nice big house relatively undestroyed. The 20 big holes in the roof, we got them repaired. One 21 whole back wall knocked out, we fixed it up. This is 22 easy, you know. You pick up craftsmen and bricks and

1 cement all inside your own Army headquarters. And I
2 stole the trucks from the motor pool, that's 3 relatively easy if you want to take the risk. And I 4 stole the gas tickets, that's easy if you want to take 5 the risk. And I called her in Paris and I said okay 6 send me the Palestine Brigade men -- and they lived in 7 the house. It was called the Jewish Chaplain's
8 Center. At that time there were 2,000 Jewish troops
9 in the city of Berlin, in four armies.

10 INTERVIEWER: The American, the British,
11 the French?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: American, British,
13 French, Russian. Did you ever see that old movie 14 "Four Men in a Jeep?" The patrolling of the city was 15 done by jeeps, each carrying four soldiers of the four 16 Allied Armies. It was called the Alierte
17 Commandatura, the Allied Command.

18 The reason we knew the Jewish troop
19 strength was because, as the Passover Seder came, the 20 first Seder after liberation, we wound up having 2,000
21 persons in the Schoneberg Rathaus for Seder, the first 22 Seder in freedom. That was the same building from

1 which Kennedy came in later years and spoke from the 2 balcony, Ich Bin Berliner." That's why we called it 3 the Jewish Chaplain's Center for the Allied Command of 4 Berlin. It was just the Americans, providing services
5 and programs for all Jewish personnel, since there
6 were no Jewish chaplains in the three other allied 7 forces.

8 INTERVIEWER: These soldiers, your groups
9 that you were able to draw from, clearly cooperated.
10 How did Jewish soldiers feel being in Germany, what 11 was going through the minds of some of the people you 12 were dealing with on a professional basis in the 13 military life?

14 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, how did they feel 15 about being in Germany? Those who were consciously 16 Jewish, and that was not all of them by any means, 17 you'd be surprised. You know, we talk about 18 assimilation today, 1992, let me tell you something, 19 assimilation was already beginning to take its toll in 20 1945. People who were not denying that they were 21 Jews, but not consciously caring Jews. They didn't 22 have any feeling. You see, Germans to them were the

1 enemy. Nazis were the enemy. Germans were 2 exploitable. A carton of cigarettes cost 70 cents in 3 the PX, no tax. A carton of cigarettes would buy you
4 a Leica camera from a German.

5 INTERVIEWER: What about the Jews who were 6 consciously Jews?

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: They were distraught -
8 very upset. They knew what had happened because the 9 Army newspaper Stars and Stripes was printing the 10 whole story of all the Nazi camps and genocide.
11 Eisenhower himself visited a concentration camp with 12 his chief of staff, Walter Biddle Smith, that was on 13 the front page of Stars and Stripes. Eisenhower said
14 this is shocking and this is awful, and there was a 15 long story, with ghastly photos of emaciated bodies
16 lying around. The guys who cared, read those stories
17 and they were constantly in the Army indoctrination
18 lectures that were given once every week. They heard 19 everything, they knew it. And the ones who cared were 20 distraught.

21 I used to try to turn their thinking away 22 from the negative and on to the positive because they

1 didn't yet make the connection. And I found that the 2 way that you got them to understand was to demand 3 something of them. If you don't demand anything of 4 people they don't respond. Nobody lines up, at the 5 window, to volunteer. When you do demand, when you 6 ask, people suddenly realize there's a sense of 7 discipline somewhere. Somewhere somebody is planning
8 something and needs your help. And that always evokes 9 a response.

10 INTERVIEWER: Let's use this perfect to 11 break and change tapes.

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

13 INTERVIEWER: They recruited some people
14 from left field.

15 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, I'm glad you're 16 here.

17 INTERVIEWER: That's why I pushed on the 18 Riegner thing and on the Wise thing.

19 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Good, good, good.

20 INTERVIEWER: Because now we have -- I
21 mean I already see how it's usable.

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Wonderful.

1 INTERVIEWER: So we'll go with that.

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

3 INTERVIEWER: Let me just catch you up
4 before we begin. Yes, okay, let's catch up for one
5 second. We're talking about now your double life, you 6 were demanding things of the troops.

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes.

8 INTERVIEWER: What did you demand of them?

9 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Of the troops?

10 INTERVIEWER: Yes.

11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: The specific thing that 12 I needed in order to keep that operation going, the 13 operation of bringing survivors across from Stettin 14 down to Berlin, the specific thing I needed was 15 cigarettes. Cigarettes were the currency of the black 16 market, it was the currency of choice. A package of 17 cigarettes was worth $15.00. A carton, ten packs, 18 worth $150.00.

19 INTERVIEWER: And you were buying it for 20 what?

21 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I wasn't buying it. How 22 would you possibly buy it? That's what it was worth.

1 If you paid 70 cents in the PX for a carton of 2 cigarettes and you could sell it for $150.00, and I
3 came along and I said to someone, "Soldier, I need a 4 carton of cigarettes. It costs me one carton per Jew.
5 Now, I'm running six trucks every night, 50 people on 6 a truck, that's 300 people."

7 INTERVIEWER: You sold this to soldiers?

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Certainly. To the ones
9 who cared. I was moving 300 people a night. I had to 10 pay 300 cartons of cigarettes, $150.00 a carton, 11 that's $45,000.00 worth of cigarettes every single 12 night, every single night. We used to leave Berlin at 13 dusk. It took about until midnight to get up to 14 Stettin, that 150 miles. We loaded in about ten 15 minutes. The Aliyah Bet guys of the Haganah on the 16 Polish side of the line had their people all ready, 17 300 people. If we had 320 we took 320. If we had to 18 throw away the baggage, the poor crumbling pieces, 19 suitcase, a valise, that mostly had in it things like 20 photographs, diaries, what did you carry? You didn't 21 carry an extra pair of socks or underwear. We used to 22 throw the baggage overboard to get three more people

1 on. Kind of ruthless. And then leaving there at 2 about midnight, getting back into Berlin by dawn, so 3 this was an operation that took place at night 4 totally.

5 I said now this is what I need, and so 6 you've got to give me a carton of cigarettes. I've 7 got to get 300 cartons a night. I need thousands of 8 cartons of cigarettes. So the G.I. paid 70 cents for 9 the carton, but he was giving me $150.00 because if he 10 took and sold that on the black market even for 11 currency, not for a Leica or a set of china, but sold 12 it for currency, he could go right over to the Army 13 post office, buy a money order in U.S. Dollars, send 14 that money order home to his wife or his mother or 15 whatever to put it in the bank for him, every single 16 week if he didn't smoke he was saving $150.00. So for 17 him to give that to me was an authentic large gift.
18 He was making a big contribution to help save Jewish 19 lives.

20 My father used to send me thousands of 21 cartons of cigarettes a week which he collected from 22 members of his synagogue, B'nai Jacob, in New Haven.

1 And I had the postal inspectors on my doorstep at the 2 Chaplain's Center almost every week because this was 3 cash and they wanted to know what I was doing with all 4 those cigarettes. And I'd say if you inspectors find 5 me doing anything illegal, then you arrest me. Until 6 that time do me a favor and don't worry about it.
7 Well, you know there's a certain power of the cloth,
8 you know, that works, and so I took advantage of it.

9 INTERVIEWER: Clearly people knew about 10 it?

11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I didn't get the 12 question?

13 INTERVIEWER: Clearly people knew, people 14 knew what you were doing.

15 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Of course.

16 INTERVIEWER: You couldn't keep an 17 operation like this concealed.

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, no, no. I always 19 adopted the policy of telling the top echelon, the 20 very top of any given Army unit, because if the 21 officer at the top knows and if he decides to be mean 22 about it, he can shut you down. And if he decides to 1 be permissive about it he just passes word down the 2 line to leave you alone. Any army is absolutely the 3 most rigid hierarchy in the world and you can turn 4 that to your use.

5 INTERVIEWER: Tell me about walking into 6 a general and telling him you were working for an 7 underground organization to save Jewish lives?

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I never said underground.
9 That word wasn't necessary.

10 INTERVIEWER: Talk about the conversation,
11 tell me about the conversation?

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, the conversation by 13 the way was not only with him in Berlin, I'll jump 14 ahead and say later on down in Frankfurt it was with 15 General Joseph T. McNarney who succeeded Eisenhower,
16 and it was with General Lucius D. Clay who succeeded 17 McNarney. So I always went to the top. How do you do 18 it? General, you know about the problem of what 19 Hitler did to the Jews? Yes. You know about the fact 20 that there is a remnant of refugees, wanderers, 21 survivors here in Europe?

22 INTERVIEWER: You were using the language

1 roughly Jews. Were survivors introduced at that 2 point?

3 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Sure, people who survived
4 Hitler, people who survived Hitler. Every camp that 5 was liberated. There were a lot of dead corpses
6 around, but there were people who walked out of there 7 alive and they survived. So we used the word then, 8 sure. As a matter of fact I used to teach them the 9 Hebrew "She'erit Hapletah," "the surviving remnant".
10 Now, these people want to go home. The General says 11 yes, well all these displaced persons they all got to 12 go home. There were 10 million of them and the Army 13 is repatriating all of them. Right, General, the Army 14 is repatriating all of them, but there is one group 15 that the Army doesn't know what to do with and that's 16 the Jews because they have no home. They're not going 17 to go back to Poland, or Hungary or Rumania or 18 anywhere in eastern Europe. If you say that you're 19 going to repatriate people according to their 20 citizenship, if it's a Belgium slave laborer or a 21 French or a Norwegian or a Dane or anybody who has 22 been conquered by the Nazis, held as a slave laborer,

1 you repatriate him back to his original home. Jews 2 are not going back to their original homes, all of 3 which are cemeteries. So the Army isn't going to 4 repatriate Jews to remain in Yugoslavia, Hungary,
5 Poland, Czechoslovakia, where do all these people want 6 to go?

7 So sometimes the Army general knows enough 8 to say well, I understand they all want to go to 9 Palestine. And if he doesn't know that he says, well 10 where do they want to go. So you tell him, and then 11 you go off on the Zionist story.

12 The American Army didn't have any more 13 sympathy for the British Army than Britons had for 14 Americans. So you painted the British as the bad guys 15 who were trying to prevent these wretched survivors 16 from going home, and you depict home as something that 17 every Bible-loving American understands - namely, The 18 Holy Land. You are talking to Protestants and 19 Catholics. And so you've got his sympathy. I never 20 once ran into an inimical officer of high rank, never 21 once. I've run into lower ranks where you can hear a 22 sort of profane kind of vulgar anti-semitism, but I

1 always discounted that. It didn't bother me.

2 INTERVIEWER: So you tell the higher ranks
3 about the Jews wanting to go home?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: And therefore, and 5 therefore we are gathering them. Who is we? Well, 6 there's an organization of Palestinians that's doing
7 the collecting. They're moving people from the east 8 to the west. Don't forget that the Russians took 9 hundreds of thousands of Jews eastward as the Nazi 10 armies moved eastward. The Russians did this for 11 their own reasons, not altruistic, but practical,
12 Stalin didn't love Jews, but this was a manpower pool 13 of perhaps a half million to a million, whom he used 14 as labor out beyond the Urals in Central Asia, cutting 15 timber, digging mines, and other crucial manual labor.

16 Well, okay, once the war is over, three 17 quarters of them are dead of starvation and hunger and 18 over-work, but there is a good chunk of hundreds of 19 thousands surviving. How can they be brought from as 20 far out as Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, Azerbaijan and 21 other such places? So I explained that there was an 22 organization of Palestinians that was trying to round

1 up these people and bring them together because if you
2 get them all collected someplace you can handle them
3 more easily. And the movement was toward the west, 4 toward the American zone of Germany, where they would 5 be safe and could wait until a political solution 6 could be found for them.

7 So I said they've come as far west as the 8 border of Germany and a bunch of them are up in a town 9 called Stettin, that's the collecting point, and at 10 that point these Palestinian guys can't come into the 11 Russian zone of Germany or the American zone of 12 Germany, so there are some of us here who are helping 13 them. Now, if the officer I'm talking to wants to be 14 really very tough, he would ask if I were doing this 15 at the expense of my Army duties? And I would reply, 16 No, sir. No, sir. I'm running my services, I've got 17 700, 800 soldiers coming every Friday night, every 18 Saturday morning. Why don't you come over, General, 19 and listen to the reading of the Torah portion of the 20 week. And he would say - okay, okay, you keep doing 21 a good job. So what are you telling me all this for?
22 I said I think you ought to know it because the

1 movement is happening in your command, in your 2 territory for which you are responsible. There might 3 come an episode where the Russians will raise hell 4 with a truckload of refugees, and you don't want to be 5 caught short not knowing what's going on. He would 6 say - Right, good, thanks. I love a guy who keeps me
7 informed. Again, this was straight Army mentality.

8 That policy always paid off. It paid off
9 in hundreds of ways. It paid off with 2,000 calories 10 per day from the Army to every DP in every camp in 11 Germany and Austria. And the JDC Joint Distribution
12 Committee brought in supplementary rations of 1,200 so 13 the DP who had been starved for years, the displaced 14 person, is eating now 3,200 calories a day, great.
15 Most of it Army food.

16 And so every night we'd run up there and 17 take our load and --

18 INTERVIEWER: You would go with them every 19 night?

20 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, no. I couldn't go 21 every night, but once a week. Because most of the 22 time I was hustling for the cigarettes.

1 INTERVIEWER: Who would be your drivers?

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: The Palestinian guys, the 3 Chayalim, (Hebrew word for soldiers) with one driver 4 and one guy riding shotgun. So it's two fellows on 5 each truck. She had said get six trucks. So I have 6 six trucks and 12 guys and they were on duty every 7 night. Every once in a while I would get some really 8 gung-ho American sergeant, Jewish guy, and he'd say 9 hey I want to ride the truck. I'd say listen, you 10 know, it's your tuchus, and I'm not going to translate 11 that.

12 INTERVIEWER: The exterior.

13 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes, your exterior,
14 anything happens, buddy, I can't help you. So he'd 15 come on board, you know, with his carbine or his M-1 16 and he'd feel that he was doing something important - 17 and he was, he was guarding 50 people. We had 18 wonderful, wonderful cooperation from Jewish guys in 19 the Motor Pool. They were all good drivers. Enough 20 good drivers so that it was a delight to have them.

21 Well, you know, you run 300 people a 22 night, night after night, month after month - well we

1 ran almost 100,000 people through Berlin that way.

2 When you bring them in, you've got a
3 problem what to do with them. And not only how do you
4 handle them, but eventually you've got to get them out
5 of the city because Berlin is an island don't forget.
6 So that was all part of the game. We opened two camps
7 in Berlin. One was at Schlachtensee out near Wannsee, 8 southwestern part of the city, and one was at 9 Tempelhof Airdrome, right on the airfield. We had 10 10,000 people in the Schlachtensee camp and 5,000 11 people in the Tempelhof camp, so I had places for 12 15,000 people.

13 INTERVIEWER: Where were you getting 300
14 cartons of cigarettes a night?

15 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I'm getting it from the 16 GIs, I'm getting it from my father, but the bulk 17 finally came in from the JDC. The first port in 18 Europe that opened up where you could get massive 19 shipments in --

20 INTERVIEWER: The JDC is the American 21 Jewish Joint Distribution Committee?

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: American Jewish Joint

1 Distribution Committee, that's a long name, but the 2 short name is "the Joint," the Joint. A marvelous
3 organization, 75 or so years old. It goes back to 4 World War I. Brilliant professionalism. If I were 5 asked to describe it in two words "Brilliant 6 professionalism." No ego gets in the way. No
7 politics get in the way. Just plain what is the task, 8 how shall we do it most efficiently and most cheaply, 9 and don't use the excuse that you haven't got the 10 money. Define the task, figure out the methodology, 11 figure out the cost and the UJA supplies the JDC with 12 the money. And there never was an insufficiency, 13 there never was an argument.

14 INTERVIEWER: So the Joint shipped in the 15 cigarettes?

16 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Car loads, freight car
17 loads. Then I began to feel relief. Antwerp opened 18 up as a usable port. Ships came into Antwerp. Goods 19 were transferred to trains, from Bremerhaven down to 20 Berlin. And I got all the cigarettes I needed. And 21 that's what kept it going. My improvisation was at 22 the beginning. But when Antwerp opened and I got in 1 touch with the Joint and they immediately responded.

2 INTERVIEWER: And they knew what you were 3 doing?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: The director of the Joint 5 was a fellow by the name of Schwartz, Doctor Joseph 6 Schwartz, and he was working hand in glove with the 7 Haganah, also helping to pay for the Aliyah Bet 8 operation. It wasn't just this one little bit of the 9 cigarettes. The Joint was also financing much of the 10 DP maintenance. They were providing 1,200 additional 11 calories per person per day in all the camps. In the 12 UJA campaign in the United States, during 1946, and 13 1947, more UJA money was being given to the Joint for 14 use in the European camps than was being given to the 15 Jewish Agency for work in Palestine, because the 16 greater need was there in Europe in those two years.
17 By 1948 it shifted and the greater share of the money
18 was going to the Palestine operation, then Israel.

19 So that was Berlin and that was the camp
20 at Schlachtensee and that was the camp at Templehof.
21 Then the trick became to organize trainloads to go out 22 of Berlin southward through the Russian zone and come

1 down to Frankfurt which was in the American zone.
2 There the DP's went into one of the 64 permanent camps
3 set up in the American zone. And then the Haganah
4 could catch its breath and sort out whom they wanted 5 to send further south to the Mediterranean to the 6 French and Italian Riviera, whence, the Haganah ships 7 came in to take aboard the people who were willing to 8 run the risk of the British gauntlet. Most of the 9 ships were caught out on the high seas in 10 contravention of international law. But that didn't 11 make any difference. The people were put by the 12 British on the island of Cyprus which became an end 13 goal in itself because it was only eight hours to 14 Haifa.
15 So the people are on Cyprus and the ship
16 is being collected and lined up in the port of Haifa.
17 Now, I never saw the following sight in actuality, but 18 I did see a photograph showing 57 vessels caught by the 19 British lined up in Haifa harbor. They were old tramp 20 steamers, Greek ships and Turkish ships, many from 21 other Mediterranean ports, a few from Europe and the 22 United States.

1 INTERVIEWER: How many of your colleagues, 2 did you speak to other chaplains, were some of your 3 colleagues involved, did you do any recruiting for the 4 Haganah yourself?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, I didn't do any 6 recruiting. And the answer is yes I did speak. There 7 were only a few. There was a fellow who was 8 subsequently a rabbi for a long time, in Washington, 9 Eugene Lipman, a good guy. He was in on it with us.
10 He worked over on the Czechoslovak border, on what we 11 call the southern route. Stettin to Berlin, was the 12 northern route. The southern route was from a town in 13 lower Silesia, part of Poland, called Nachod, across 14 the border to a town called Klotzk in Czechoslovakia, 15 westward to Prague, back eastward to Bratislava in 16 Hungary, back westward to Vienna, across the border to 17 Munich. That was the southern route. Lipman worked 18 the southern route. He was wonderful.

19 Who else was? There was a fellow by the 20 name of Meyer Abramowitz, a conservative rabbi, now 21 retired in Miami. He followed me in Berlin. We had 22 closed the route down by then. He didn't have much of

1 an inflow, but he maintained the large camp
2 populations, and later moved down to Italy to work in 3 camps for the JDC. He married a DP lady from a camp 4 in Italy. So Mike was in. Abe Klausner was in it at 5 the beginning, not for long, but for a few months.

6 There were another dozen ex-chaplains,
7 whose names I don't remember, who had been 8 demobilized, were back in the U.S., whom we re-9 recruited to come back into uniform. On that southern 10 route, which I described, we wanted to put a chaplain 11 on every train of 1,000 people. A Jewish chaplain
12 riding that train from Prague to Bratislava, to Vienna
13 to Munich was very helpful. All kinds of episodes 14 occurred, all kinds of interferences, all kinds of 15 problems, all kinds of strikes from the people
16 themselves, personal problems. One authoritative 17 American Army officer on the train in uniform with his 18 chaplain's insignia had a very calming effect on the 19 nervous passengers and a very salutary affect on 20 nervous border guards.

21 While we wanted a chaplain on every train,
22 we didn't have the manpower in Europe. At Rabbi

1 Bernstein's request, the Army called back to active 2 duty a dozen chaplains for a half year and we had the 3 advantage of their services on that southern route.
4 I'm sorry not to remember names.

5 No, I didn't recruit because there were 6 two fellows whose names I shall not mention, who, when 7 I told them that we could use their help and asked 8 them if they wanted to participate, they gave me such 9 a chicken answer, "we are here to serve the Army and 10 we're not going to do anything else, we're not going 11 to get mixed up in this business, this is political," 12 that I didn't want to make any more cold requests.

13 INTERVIEWER: And you felt no
14 incompatibility between your Army service and this 15 work?

16 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, it was a delightful
17 synergy. It was wonderful. First of all it was good 18 cover, and secondly every time I involved GIs in this 19 thing, I was teaching a bunch of Jews about their 20 responsibility. Come on, it was great. What was I 21 going to do, give soldiers lectures about VD - or go 22 visit them in the stockade. I never was very good at 1 that pastoral work, anyhow.

2 INTERVIEWER: Did you visit the DP camps
3 themselves?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, come on. I visited
5 scores of camps. I was asked, after the Berlin 6 episode, by Rabbi Philip Bernstein, the new Advisor on 7 Jewish Affairs to the Commanding General, to come to 8 Frankfurt to serve as his deputy. The commanding 9 general in the European theatre, beginning with 10 Eisenhower himself, realized that he had to have at 11 his disposal a person of high stature in the Jewish 12 community to serve as his advisor on Jewish affairs.

13 Because the Army was accumulating tens of 14 thousands of Jewish people, problems were going to 15 develop. The Army commander hollered for help, so to 16 speak. He wanted somebody who could help him, to whom 17 he could pass on some of these problems. He didn't 18 want to have the Army get into an adversarial position 19 with these DPs.

20 So there was a consultative arrangement
21 agreed upon among five major Jewish organizations in 22 the United States and the Department of War that

1 whomever they would designate as a candidate whom they 2 all agreed upon, the Army would accept that person,
3 give him the simulated rank of a Two-Star General
4 although he was a civilian and remained in civilian
5 clothes, but for purposes of logistics in the Army 6 such high rank gave him certain privileges. He could 7 buy two cartons of whiskey a month from the PX, and 8 you get a certain kind of car, and you have a 9 permanent driver. He could call up anybody, give his 10 rank and name, stating that he was advisor to General 11 McNarney or General Clay, and anyone would listen to 12 him.

13 Bernstein was brilliant. The first
14 advisor was a chaplain, a major by the name of Judah 15 Nadich, a conservative rabbi in New York. He remained 16 with Eisenhower for about three months. Eisenhower
17 went home, Nadich went home. That's when the Army 18 decided it better institutionalize this thing.
19 Bernstein came and stayed, a year and a half or 20 something like that. Bernstein was assigned to Army
21 Headquarters which were in Frankfurt in the IG Farben 22 building, a great German industrial combine.

1 Frankfurt was bombed to pieces yet this particluar 2 building didn't have a window broken because it was 3 designated as future HQ and the U.S. Air Force was 4 informed not to touch it, right?

5 Bernstein's office was two offices away
6 from General Clay. I mean literally, couldn't be 7 closer. Bernstein called me in Berlin and said "hey
8 listen, I don't know anything about the Army. I am a 9 Major-General (simulated rank) that doesn't mean
10 anything to me, I am entitled to a military aid, I 11 need you, will you come down to Frankfurt and be my 12 military aid. And I said I will be happy to on one 13 condition, that he understood that I have Haganah 14 responsibilities.

15 INTERVIEWER: And you were able to say
16 that directly over the phone and clearly?

17 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, all Army, at his 18 level, all phones are what are called secure. They're 19 constantly tested electronically for taps and you 20 didn't have the kind of surveillance by satellite 21 where today you listen to every long distance phone 22 conversation in the entire world. The NSA here

1 listens to every single long distance phone 2 conversation it wants to.

3 So he said "well I don't know what that 4 means but, you know, come on down and tell me." So I 5 came down because I really liked him. We were 6 intellectually close and spiritually close, we were on 7 the same wavelength. That guy was as Zionist as I was 8 from the day he was born.

9 I came down to Frankfurt and explained it
10 to him and he said "well that's fine, I'm all in favor 11 of that, just don't tell me about it." Because the 12 theory always is that it is preferable for the 13 superior officer not to know if he doesn't have to.
14 It works on the principle which is called "The need to 15 know." Phil said, I have no need to know so don't 16 tell me, so then I can't be guilty of making any 17 mistakes and I won't have to lie or anything. Very 18 good, good arrangement. But anything that was to help 19 Palestine or Israel or the DP cause was fine with him.
20 And so, yes, we were in DP camps all the time.

21 Bernstein felt that the DP population
22 should have an authoritative, authorized base. What

1 does that mean? There was an organization in 2 existence which was born right after the war called 3 the Central Committee of Liberated Jews, and then 4 there was a huge fight regarding the preposition.
5 Liberated Jews of Germany or Liberated Jews in 6 Germany. Those two words tell the whole ideological 7 difference. So the fight raged and finally they 8 settled on "in Germany," because that indicated the 9 temporary nature of their residence, rather than the 10 more permanent implication that they were "of" 11 Germany.

12 We then arranged a ceremony for a charter
13 of recognition to be granted by the United States Army 14 to the Central Committee. The ceremony was held at 15 Headquarters, Farben building with a half a dozen of 16 the DPs who were the chief officers of the Central 17 Committee and half a dozen Major-Generals and so 18 forth, and the photograph exists where General
19 McNarney and Rabbi Philip Bernstein are side by side 20 signing the charter of recognition.

21 Now, that meant that the officials of the 22 Central Committee could travel on Army vehicles, carry

1 Army I.D. It meant that they move move around and 2 organize a national life for quarter of a million Jews 3 in the camps.

4 INTERVIEWER: Were you with Ben Gurion
5 when he visited a DP camp?

6 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes, I was. I took him
7 into one camp. He was on his way to the 1st Zionist 8 Congress that was being held after the war and he 9 remembered me from the first episode in the Paris
10 hotel even though I didn't know him at that time. So 11 again I got a call from Paris from his bodyguard, a 12 fellow by the name of Mordechai Cirkus, who said Mr.
13 Ben Gurion wants to come into Germany and will you get 14 him the necessary pass etcetera, and he wants to visit 15 a camp and you decide where.

16 We had had a very terrible episode at a 17 camp called Babenhausen which was near Stuttgart. A 18 trainload of more than a thousand Jews passed through 19 Munich, came up to Stuttgart and the people were going 20 to be put in a D.P. camp. Now, what was this camp?
21 It was a former Russian POW, prisoner of war, camp
22 maintained by the German army. As a prisoner of war

1 camp the Nazis didn't care how they treated the 2 Russians so there were no beds, no bunks, only 3 concrete floors with straw thrown on them. The camp
4 was totally encircled by a heavy chain link fence, 5 barbed wire, guard towers, heavy search lights, the 6 whole apparatus looked like a bloody extermination
7 camp. I'll never forget it.

8 The train came around the curve, many 9 cars, freight cars, the same kind of freight cars that 10 were used to transport Jews to concentration camps.

11 They've been on the train now three days, which was 12 bad enough. And they knew they were being taken to a 13 DP camp in Germany, with a totally uncertain future
14 awaiting. They also knew if you had patience someday 15 the future was going to be solved, but meanwhile you 16 had to keep your hope up. So they were not resisting 17 the idea of going into a DP camp, but they resisted 18 the idea of going into this particular camp which 19 looked to them like an extermination camp. The U.S.
20 army had slipped up somehow. The officer who had been 21 told to tear down the barbed wire, take down the guard 22 towers, get some cots in there and some mattresses,

1 none of it had been done. It was a typical 2 bureaucratic slip-up, okay. It happens.

3 INTERVIEWER: Not malice, just --

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, not malice, just 5 inefficiency. The people saw the barbed wire and 6 immediately made a sit down strike on the train.
7 We're not going to get off these cars. There were 8 enough agitators among them, exercising the right of 9 freedom for the first time to talk about their own
10 fate and they said we're not getting off, and alles 11 ist Kuput. It didn't take three minutes before the 12 mood froze.

13 I was there, for I liked to be present 14 when a new camp was inaugurated, in case there were 15 problems. Well, in this case the problem was major.
16 We set up a microphone alongside the track and tried 17 to talk to the people. Nothing doing.

18 INTERVIEWER: In what language, Yiddish?

19 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yiddish. Yes, Yiddish.
20 I learned German in high school and in college. By 21 the time my parents were married in 1918, English was 22 the language in the house. So I didn't know any

1 Yiddish, but I knew good German. And so every time I
2 would appear before the DPs I would use German.

3 One fine day an episode occurred which 4 taught me a lesson. In a camp, at a meeting, there 5 was a little fellow sitting in the front row and he 6 folds his arms like this across his chest and I can 7 see he's annoyed. And I can hear him say in a low
8 voice (speaking Yiddish), "Don't speak German." I
9 keep speaking German. A little bit louder he says 10 (speaking Yiddish), "I'm demanding a word from you in 11 Yiddish." I don't pay any attention to him. Finally 12 he stands up and he shouts (in Yiddish), "Either 13 you're going to talk Yiddish or I'm going to run out 14 of here." So that taught me a lesson. And I started 15 to twist my German around and ultimately I learned 16 Yiddish.

17 So, yes, I talked on the microphone to the 18 people on the train in Yiddish, but nothing doing.
19 They wouldn't budge. General Keyes, a Lieutenant-20 General, Three-Star Commander of the Third Army, 21 Patton's successor, came out to the track. He speaks 22 in English, I translate for him, and the people see

1 all the stars and all the fruit salad on the uniform 2 and they know who he is. I've told them who he is.
3 It doesn't make the slightest difference. They were 4 polite, but...

5 Colonel Ed Martin, the Catholic Chief
6 Chaplain of the Third Army, comes out to speak.
7 Nothing doing. Abe Hyman, a Major, the lawyer on 8 Rabbi Bernstein's staff, pleaded with them to 9 disembark. Nothing doing. Okay, the first night they 10 sleep in the train. By the second day they're getting 11 a little hungry. We pass food up and down the train 12 and bring out a whole bunch of Army field kitchens to 13 feed them. When the Army wants to cooperate it's 14 easy.

15 After enormous efforts in which the people
16 saw whole bunches of soldiers coming out with wire 17 cutters cutting the barbed wire off, knocking down the 18 towers, they saw it physically with their own eyes, 19 and they realized they were not going into any kind of 20 a trap, they dismounted from the train. That was the 21 beginning of Camp Babenhausen. Such a beginning is 22 not designed to create good strong morale thereafter.

1 That was the camp to which I decided to take Ben
2 Gurion. So I said, Cirkus, you want me to take Ben 3 Gurion to one camp, I'm going to take him to 4 Babenhausen, but you have to tell him that it's a very 5 problematic place. The episode of the initial strike 6 took place some months earlier, but the mood in the 7 camp was still lousy, it never did get repaired.
8 Cirkus said okay, it's all right, the old man has been 9 in tough situations before.

10 We come in, there are about 5,000 people
11 in the camp, there is no auditorium, there is no place 12 for 5,000 people to sit, they're standing in what was 13 the stable where the horses were kept, a huge room 14 like an airplane hangar. There's a microphone, there 15 is a wooden platform. Abe Hyman and I climb up on the 16 platform with the Old Man and he stands there, and we 17 introduce him. And there is a loud, cheerful, happy 18 welcome because he, you know, he was a figure.

19 And the camp chairman came up and said we 20 want to tell you how we feel and started to talk about 21 the fact that life here is not physically dangerous, 22 but life here doesn't have any meaning, what are we

1 doing here, what are we doing here? We are trying to 2 teach the children in the school and we are trying to 3 take care of the sick people and we try to build a 4 life and we have now our own camp police. They had 5 bicycles and they had whistles and they had arm bands, 6 they kept order. It was a sign of independence.
7 We're doing everything we can, but it's all nothing.
8 And so you're coming here today brings us the greatest 9 hope in the world and we hope you have something to 10 tell us.

11 Ben Gurion stood up and started to talk 12 about what he was trying to build in Palestine and 13 what efforts were being made on the international 14 political scene with the British and American 15 Commission of Inquiry, and somebody else, the UNSCOP
16 Commission, another Commission of Inquiry, who needs 17 it. You know, we got a little heckling from the 18 audience. But B.G. continued to explain that there 19 was a major push on to get a state created and a free 20 government to which they could come. But he wasn't 21 going to offer them any immediate panacea, and he 22 wasn't going to offer them any immediate results

1 because he would be kidding them. He talked firmly, 2 he talked beautifully, he talked honestly because that 3 was his method, his forte. He wasn't a manipulative
4 politician. He was an ideologue. He had his own 5 ideology, but he never tried to say anything to give 6 people false illusions, false hopes.

7 When he got through there was silence, no
8 applause. And finally he said "Listen, I have no 9 certificates in my pocket for you, don't you 10 understand that? But I am telling you that I do bring 11 you hope. Now, let's sing the song of hope. I want 12 to hear Hatikva." He had a monotone and he couldn't 13 sing. I have a monotone, I couldn't help him. The 14 crowd slowly started kind of a crackling, crack, off 15 key, but it began to build, it began to build some 16 momentum and then it came out into full burst and 17 there was a big singing of Hatikva by which time he 18 was crying. And that was the end of the meeting and 19 he walked off and he was shaking his head. And we got 20 outside, got in the car, he said "My God, I don't know 21 what's worse, people being burned up in the death 22 camps or people waiting in these camps without hope.

1 I don't know how to say which is worse."

2 Years later I read in his voluminous
3 diaries, and I want to read here, just one paragraph.
4 This is what he wrote: "The people of Babenhausen 5 finally understood that their unloved camp was not the 6 end of the line, but a way station on the road to 7 freedom. The distrust and bitterness I had faced that 8 day in October gave way in December to patient hope."
9 December was the Zionist Congress in Basel in 1946.
10 So he sensed the mistrust, he sensed the bitterness, 11 he sensed everything, he understood it, but he said he 12 believed that he gave them hope that their stay there 13 was a way station on the road, it was not the end of 14 the road.

15 For years after that, he and I saw each 16 other very often in the course of my whole UJA career
17 and the course of the years that we lived in Israel 18 after that, and every once in a while he would get a 19 glint in his eye and he would say let's talk about 20 Babenhausen. Sort of a symbol to him, the way 21 station.

22 So, yes, we used to go to visit lots of

1 the camps and there were lots of problems and riots
2 and Jews breaking out of camps.

3 INTERVIEWER: When you look back on this 4 period what do you see from the outside was happening
5 to the survivors in their journey? You mentioned 6 hope.

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes, that's what we 8 concentrated on. We tried to concentrate, we tried to 9 build up a sense that (a) there was a large group of 10 institutions and individuals who cared for them; there 11 was somebody looking after their welfare, there was 12 somebody trying to take care of their immediate daily 13 needs, and somebody trying to build a future for them.
14 And that was the basic message and we reinforced it 15 all the time by active conduct.

16 The Jewish Agency would send us a singer
17 or a piano player or some other type of artist. I 18 remember a lady, Paula Padani, a great pianist. We 19 put her on the circuit and sent her through 30, 40, 50 20 camps, as much time as she could give us. We did all 21 kinds of things. The Agency sent over about a hundred 22 school teachers. And we put these Palestinian school

1 teachers in the schools which were organized in each
2 camp to keep the kids busy. You did everything you
3 could and you kept publicizing through the camp 4 newspaper network every time an illegal ship would 5 sail so that hope was kept alive. Speaking of ships, 6 there was a dreadful instrument called the Va'ad
7 Aliyah, the Committee on Immigration, I call it 8 dreadful because it was operated according to the 9 Zionist political key.

10 INTERVIEWER: The Maftayach?

11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: You know, okay. This 12 Maftayach, the key. Depending on --

13 INTERVIEWER: I don't want to be flip 14 about it because our people listening to this are not 15 going to. This is a very important story. Let's go 16 back and --

17 RABBI FRIEDMAN: And with every reason to 18 be flip about it or to be more than sarcastic. I 19 called it dreadful. It was not a humane way of 20 handling the DP's, it was a purely political way.
21 This committee had on it representatives of every 22 Zionist political party. The committee fought

1 ferociously over the passenger load. If a ship had 2 room for 600 people each political party fought for 3 its share of the 600 berths. No consideration of 4 women and children first. That doesn't go anyway
5 because you don't want to separate families. No 6 consideration for family need. I mean we knew the 7 populations in each camp so intimately. We never 8 treated them as a mass, we always treated them as much 9 individually as possible.

10 So it would be very easy to say if there 11 are 600 places, give us the 600 neediest people in 12 camp A, or give us 100 people each from six different 13 camps so you'll build morale in six camps that indeed 14 the ships are going and maybe someday each person 15 would get on a ship. There would be ways of doing it.
16 No, only the political key operated. Namely, each 17 party argued what it's relative strength was and 18 demanded the number of berths on that ship according 19 to its strength. Each party representative would say,
20 my party is X percent of the Jewish people, I want X
21 percent of the seats. If you ask him who he cares
22 about, he didn't care about the individuals, give me

1 X percent of the seats because when they get to 2 Palestine they're going to be voters for my party
3 because my party took them out of Germany.

4 INTERVIEWER: Let's go back for a moment,
5 you say you knew the people intimately in that real 6 sensing their needs. What were the needs?

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: The needs were simply 8 spiritual and non material. They were psychological, 9 spiritual and psychological. The people needed to 10 believe that they would not be in these camps forever, 11 that this wouldn't be the end, that there was a 12 different end. Now, they knew that they could always 13 be repatriated back to their original land of 14 citizenship. All they had to do was say to the Army, 15 I'm Hungarian so send me back to Hungary. That's not 16 what they wanted. So they were waiting, waiting, 17 waiting. Now, they're not hungry, they're not in 18 danger, their medical needs are cared for, so what do 19 they need? They need an uplifting of the spirit.
20 They need belief and confidence that there would be a 21 successful end.

22 INTERVIEWER: Did they want to come to

1 America?

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Well, there was always
3 some number who wanted that. And HIAS at that time, 4 the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, was responsible for 5 taking to America those who wanted. Some small number 6 went to America. I don't know how to quantify it.
7 Every few months, there would be a ship and the trans-
8 Atlantic vessels always had room for 1,200 or 1,500
9 people. So I don't know, if there was a ship a month
10 you were talking about 15, or 20,000 people per year 11 compared to the large number who were waiting for 12 Palestine.

13 INTERVIEWER: What of Palestine
14 representatives?

15 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, Palestine. Listen, 16 if you talk about Palestine, it's like reciting the 17 Shmoneh Esreh every day. If you do, then you're 18 talking about rebuilding Zion and rebuilding 19 Jerusalem. I mean it was bred into the bone with 20 these people who came out of the small towns and 21 villages of Eastern Europe. Even the sophisticated 22 ones from the bigger cities had some memory of that

1 tradition. I'm not saying that there was a lot of 2 religiosity in the formal sense of that word. Yes,
3 there was a synagogue in every camp and there was a 4 rabbi in every camp, and he took care of second 5 marriages which were very frequent, people who had 6 lost spouses, and found others during those three and 7 a half years in the camps, but you're not talking 8 about a devout population. If anything, you're 9 talking about skeptics as far as religion is 10 concerned. Where was God, when the crematorium fires
11 were burning. But the ethnic and the folk traditions, 12 the memories of holidays and the memories of food and 13 the memories of basic prayers - all were oriented 14 toward rebuilding Zion.

15 If you recited the blessing after meals, 16 in the blessing after every meal, if you said it, is 17 the Oseh Shalom bimromor, "in our day quickly." So 18 that was their orientation.

19 There was a camp outside of Frankfurt
20 called Zeilsheim and Eleanor Roosevelt came to visit.
21 She stood up there, she was kind of a passionate 22 speaker, and she was trying to get the crowd to 1 respond to her. She tried to awaken the crowd out of 2 its lethargy. That's the way she explained it to me

3 later, when we became friendly. She said tauntingly, 4 "Perhaps you do not want to go to Palestine, perhaps 5 it takes too long, perhaps the British don't let you, 6 perhaps you'll lose confidence, you'll lose faith in 7 it. Do you really want to go to Palestine?" You 8 know, the way the question was phrased and intoned was 9 intended to evoke a massive roar, which is what she 10 got. But she couldn't have evoked it if they didn't 11 feel it. They were homogeneously, unanimously zeroed 12 in to the belief that Palestine was the only future 13 they had.

14 INTERVIEWER: When did you leave Europe?

15 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Leave Europe, let me
16 think. Let's see, there was the Exodus. No, no, I 17 left before the Exodus. The Exodus sailed in, I think 18 it was September, I'm not sure, but I think it was 19 September '47, so right before that, August, July, 20 summer of '47.

21 INTERVIEWER: Why did you go home?

22 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Why did I go home? A

1 very interesting story. Professor Scholem, Gershom
2 Scholem from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem had 3 come to Germany. We got a pass for him.

4 INTERVIEWER: He's the great authority on 5 Jewish mysticism?

6 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes, a German Jew by 7 origin, intellect to the nth degree, a warm Jew, loved 8 to be in Israel, emigrated long before statehood. He 9 came to Germany on a mission, in the uniform of UNRRA, 10 United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation. He had a 11 90-day permit to work in a warehouse in Offenbach 12 across the river from Frankfurt where Alfred 13 Rosenberg, the philosopher of the Nazi movement had 14 collected several million volumes of Judaica.

15 INTERVIEWER: We're going to break here
16 only because it's too precious a conversation to lose.
17 We have to change a tape.

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay, another tape,
19 right.

20 INTERVIEWER: I don't want to lose this.

21 RABBI FRIEDMAN: This is a great story.

22 INTERVIEWER: No, I don't want you to go

1 any further.

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

3 INTERVIEWER: I know part of the story.

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

5 INTERVIEWER: So is this hour even worth
6 it?

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: The other thing besides
8 the Talmud story is the story of the Kielce Pogrom, 9 that's a very crucial story.

10 INTERVIEWER: -- that's from the --

11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Crucial story. Okay.

12 INTERVIEWER: Yes.

13 RABBI FRIEDMAN: But we're past it in 14 point of view of time.

15 INTERVIEWER: Go ahead please.

16 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay.

17 INTERVIEWER: Tell us a little bit about 18 Gersham Scholem's visit?

19 RABBI FRIEDMAN: He received permission to 20 come into Germany to visit and work in the Offenbach 21 depot of approximately 3,000,000 volumes which Alfred 22 Rosenberg had collected. The intent of the collection

1 was to form a basic library of Judaica which German
2 scholars would study and find in the very Jewish 3 sources the words with which to condemn the Jewish 4 people as being parasites and destroyers and anti-5 Christ and everything else so that you would condemn 6 the Jewish people out of their very own mouths. Some 7 scholar would be found to collate the material and 8 synthesize it into one simple volume that then would 9 become the property of every single decent person on 10 earth. The Nazi plan was that after they had killed 11 all the Jewish bodies, they would then also kill the 12 Jewish soul and spirit. This was the intention of 13 Alfred Rosenberg and this was the process.

14 Now, what was collected, literally
15 actually collected physically, in that warehouse were 16 mostly K'ley Kodesh and repetitious forms of the same 17 prayer book in different languages.

18 INTERVIEWER: By K'ley Kodesh you mean the 19 holy books?

20 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes - and also silver
21 Torah ornaments. But among that mass of 3 million 22 fairly unimportant volumes, from Scholem's point of 1 view, there were 1,300 priceless incunabula,

2 manuscripts handwritten from early Middle Ages.
3 Scholem worked for 90 days like a beaver, slept in 4 that same warehouse, sorting out 3 million volumes and 5 winnowed out these 1,300 precious, priceless,
6 irreplaceable items. He packed them into five large 7 wooden packing crates, each five feet by five feet, 8 not impossible to handle, not gigantic, and labeled 9 them.

10 And that's where the fear started.
11 Because a couple of days before his time ran out he 12 came to me, almost in tears, with a terrible problem.
13 He explained that he had applied for permission to 14 take these to the Hebrew University, but the Monuments
15 and Fine Arts section of American Military Government
16 in Germany had refused him permission. He said, 17 "They're the ones who allowed me in the first place to 18 come and do the sorting. They now refuse me 19 permission to take these to Palestine. And at first 20 they wouldn't give me an explanation for that refusal, 21 but when I pushed, I finally got it." The Jewish 22 Theological Seminary, in New York protested that there

1 was no reason why all of these precious manuscripts
2 should go to Palestine. All of them or some of them
3 should be placed in their library, the greatest Jewish 4 library in New York, a city with the greatest Jewish 5 population in the world.

6 This is a clear reflection of the non-7 Zionist, I don't want to say anti-Zionist, position of 8 the seminary at that time. Perhaps my remark can be 9 interpreted as a condemnation. I'm not trying to 10 condemn anybody. All I'm trying to say is that the 11 Monuments of Fine Arts Section of the Army had a 12 letter from the Jewish Theological Seminary saying 13 that the Army should not send all these documents to 14 Palestine. They had been collected from all the 15 locations in Europe whose descendants are either dead 16 or have migrated to the new world. So that was their 17 sort of cool, cold objective reasoning.

18 The Army didn't want to get into an 19 internecine Jewish fight so it put a hold on Prof.
20 Scholem. And he was distraught because his time was 21 up, could not be renewed, and he didn't know what to 22 do. Here he's got the manuscript in five packing

1 cases and what does he do with them? Once again I had 2 to make a decision at a certain moment in time without 3 much opportunity for reflection. I said: "Professor, 4 go home, relax, don't worry about it, I'll steal them,
5 I'll get them out of the warehouse and I'll get them
6 to you, and don't ask me how because I don't know yet 7 myself." I was sorry that he had labeled them because 8 what was happening in Germany at the time was a very 9 active black market in old manuscripts. Pages of 10 Beethoven and pages of Mozart, were selling for tens 11 of thousands of dollars.

12 Much later on when the story finally broke 13 on the front page of the Stars and Stripes, and I can 14 show you the issue which I have kept to this day, it 15 listed the value of this treasure as $5 million.

16 He went home. What I did very simply was:
17 on New Year's Eve, when everybody was off duty or 18 drunk, I took a JDC ambulance, drove it to the back 19 loading dock of the Offenbach warehouse. There was a 20 Jewish captain in command of the warehouse, his name 21 was Benkovich, he was from some place in Texas. I 22 said listen turn your head the other way, I'm going to

1 sign for these five boxes as though I am a JDC officer
2 by the name of Koppel Pinson (who was no longer in 3 Germany, he had gone home four months earlier).

4 INTERVIEWER: Koppel Pinson was the 5 professor of Queens College, a very distinguished 6 historian?

7 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Right. And he worked for 8 the JDC, the Joint, and he had permission to draw from 9 that warehouse in Offenbach books to be distributed 10 throughout the camps to any children's school or camp 11 libraries that wanted any of these books so long as 12 the officer in charge of the warehouse certified that 13 they were not irreplaceable, that they were just 14 common ordinary books. So Pinson had the authority to 15 sign to draw stuff out. I signed his name, put my 16 initials underneath his name. He hadn't been in 17 Germany for four months already. Benkovich concurred
18 with me, conspired jointly with me, and I said turn 19 your head the other way and I'm going to take the 20 boxes. So I took them out in the ambulance, they just 21 fit. And I hid the ambulance until such time as I 22 could get the boxes on to a freight train to Paris

1 where I intended to go to 135 Avenue, Wagram, which 2 was the Office of the Jewish Agency, give them the 3 boxes and say, deliver to Scholem. They refused to 4 take them. They wouldn't have anything to do with it.

5 But they gave me a tip that did turn out
6 to be useful. They said that Chaim Weizmann's library 7 was being shipped from England to Palestine and the 8 vessel was stopping at the port of Antwerp and I could 9 get my boxes of books on to the ship and mix them in 10 with his boxes of books. They would get in to 11 Palestine probably without being recognized. The 12 British didn't care about this. This was Weizmann's 13 library and Scholem's name is a professor, it was on 14 the outside of the boxes so it would go okay.

15 INTERVIEWER: And Chaim Weizmann was the 16 leader of the World Zionist Movement and later became 17 president of that --

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: That's the same
19 gentleman. He lived in England for decades and had 20 accumulated a marvelous library there and at this 21 point in his life decided that he wanted to get his 22 books shipped over to Palestine, prior to his eventual

1 move himself. So the thing was neatly executed, 2 neatly done, and I went off on a short leave to 3 Denmark because I wanted to see Hamlet's castle.

4 A few days later I came back and found two 5 CID guys sitting in my office waiting for me. CID, 6 Criminal Investigation Division of the United States
7 Army. Very nice, sympathetic, friendly guys, not 8 threatening, but very firm. And they said listen, 9 Chaplain, you are now under investigation seriously.
10 This will lead to a general court martial. We would 11 just like to tell you that we have you dead to rights.
12 What we really do is we need your confession, that's 13 all.

14 Now, here is your signature on the paper
15 your signed to draw the boxes out. Here is the number 16 of the ambulance of the JDC which you used as 17 transport. Here is the number of the freight car on 18 which you loaded them and on which you slept overnight 19 from Frankfurt to Paris in the freight car with the 20 boxes. Here is the number of the truck you used to go
21 from Paris to Antwerp. So, you know --

22 INTERVIEWER: They had done their

1 homework.

2 RABBI FRIEDMAN: -- I stalled them and I
3 said well listen, come on fellows, you know, I mean 4 this is like a bombshell, I don't know what you're 5 talking about, I haven't got any idea what this is all 6 about, so let me try to grok it and sleep on it and,
7 you know, I'll meet you tomorrow.

8 I went to Rabbi Bernstein and I said you 9 remember our principle of need to know, well I think 10 this one you need to know, and I told him. Without 11 any more ado he picked up the phone and he called 12 General Clay. We're two offices away. He says 13 General, I've got to come in and see you about 14 something, and Clay always took him in immediately.
15 He told Clay and then he brought me in and Clay looked 16 at me and said why did you do it? I said because I 17 didn't want the stuff to get stolen and lost a second 18 time. Those boxes wouldn't be secure in that 19 warehouse. Somebody would rip them open. Somebody 20 would see the stuff, somebody would recognize it. An 21 antiquarian would be approached, the stuff has value.
22 It was stolen once by the Nazis. It's owners are

1 gone. The Jewish people collectively is concentrating
2 in Palestine. Palestine will be free one fine day.
3 These should be in the National Jewish Library in 4 Palestine, that's the successor, inheritor of all this 5 stuff. That's why I did it.

6 He said I have to ask you a formal
7 question, did you have any intention ever of diverting 8 any of this to your own use and selling it for your 9 own profit? I said no. He said I believe you. He 10 knew me reasonably well. He said well, all right then 11 here is what I'm going to do. I am going to order 12 that the boxes be brought back here because I am not 13 going to get into a fight with the Seminary in New 14 York, and I am going to let the Monuments and Fine 15 Arts section decide on the distribution and that's the 16 Army way.

17 I said, sir, for God's sake don't do that.
18 Don't subject them to another voyage. An airplane can 19 go down, a ship can go down. They are irreplaceable.
20 Don't do it. There is an inventory, Professor Scholem 21 has it, he knows what he put in the boxes, there are 22 1,300 items. Have the boxes opened in Israel in the 1 presence of any authority you trust. There's an 2 American Consul, there attached to the British 3 Headquarters. Take somebody, an American, a military 4 or non military, have your person stand there as the 5 boxes are opened, check the inventory, and leave them 6 there. If you want to decide on for future eventual 7 distribution, fine. I'm not going to argue with you

8 about that, but leave the material there, don't move
9 it.

10 So he looks at me, he says yes, possession 11 is 9/10ths of the law isn't it? Once it's there it's 12 there, isn't it? I said, sir, don't get me into that 13 discussion. So immediately we had an understanding.
14 He said okay, it's a very reasonable suggestion. So 15 ordered, and I will so organize it.

16 "Now, he asked, what do we do about you?"

17 I mean this is a long answer to the question about 18 what provoked my leaving Germany. Gen. Clay picked up 19 the phone, called head of the CID, said, "I want you 20 to kill the court-martial, that's out and over, I'm 21 sending this officer back to the ZI," back to the zone 22 of the interior. That's what the United States was

1 called as far as the Army overseas was concerned. The 2 United States is the interior. So this officer is 3 being dismissed from my command and will be discharged
4 from the Army and so you kill the court-martial.

5 Finished just like that. He came back
6 from the phone and said, and "The boxes will remain 7 there, are you happy?" he said. "Perfectly 8 satisfied," I replied. "Now, it's between Scholem and 9 your surrogate, whoever your person is over there, and 10 I'm satisfied that it will work out the way we hope it 11 will."

12 So I was given orders to go back to the 13 U.S. and be discharged. I went to Fort Dix in New 14 Jersey and the customary procedure there is that when 15 you're being discharged they ask you a bunch of 16 questions, have you returned your gas mask, have you 17 returned your rifle, blah, blah, blah. And one of the 18 questions is, do you wish to remain in the United 19 States Army Reserve Corps retaining your commission
20 and advancing in rank. So the Sergeant who is reading 21 all of this to me, you know, he's doing it by rote.
22 All of a sudden he stops himself, do you wish to

1 remain" oops, that doesn't apply to you. There
2 is a note here that you are not authorized to remain
3 in the Reserves, you are out." That's how that ended.
4 That was after being four days in the stockade for a
5 whole other story because of Morgenthau.

6 Henry Morgenthau, who was the head of the 7 UJA, said "I need you to go around with me making 8 speeches in America and you've got stories to tell 9 that will help raise a lot of money." And I said but 10 I have to go to Fort Dix and be discharged. And he 11 said well, I'll call the Secretary of War and I said
12 no, sir, call the 1st sergeant at the separation
13 center and he said I don't deal with sergeants, I deal 14 with cabinet members. So I said well then get 15 something in writing. He did indeed call Secretary of 16 War Patterson, who told him over the phone o.k. you 17 want to keep this chaplain with you 30 days, in 18 uniform on detached service to you, I'll write the 19 orders. I never got a copy of the orders, Fort Dix 20 never got a copy of the orders. I reported to Fort 21 Dix 30 days later and was arrested at the gate for 22 being AWOL, absent without leave, and the Chaplain of

1 all people to be absent without leave, I mean how can 2 you do this. It took me four days to convince them to 3 give me a dime and let me make a phone call.

4 And then the commanding officer, a one-
5 star general, was told by Morgenthau, yes I had the 6 chaplain on duty with me and I will get you a telex
7 from Secretary Patterson and you'll have it in ten 8 minutes. The general came back to me in the cell, 9 gives me a cigar and says don't hold anything against 10 me. I said come on, come on, you don't think I know 11 the racket well enough. No, of course it's not 12 against you, it's against Mr. Secretary Morgenthau, he 13 didn't get me anything in writing, the Army goes by 14 what's on paper.

15 Here is the end of the manuscript story.

16 In Palestine the American officer witnessed the 17 opening of the boxes, agreed that not a piece was 18 missing. They nailed the boxes up again and took them 19 up to Mount Scopus to the library. We are talking 20 about 1947, okay. In the War of Independence in 1948
21 we lost Mount Scopus, didn't we? So the boxes are up 22 there now in Jordanian hands, once again in jeopardy.

1 INTERVIEWER: Mount Scopus was that
2 section of east Jerusalem that the Hebrew University 3 was built on?

4 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Originally.

5 INTERVIEWER: That the Hebrew University
6 was built on originally, and during the '48 war
7 between Israel and Jordan --

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Was lost to Jordan.

9 INTERVIEWER: -- was lost to Jordan, but 10 an Israeli contingent remained on Mount Scopus but 11 there was no access to them.

12 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Okay, so this Israeli 13 contingent, 140 men, was allowed to inhabit a trench
14 between the Augusta Victoria Hospital on the one side 15 and some other marker on the other side which was on 16 the apex of the hill on the top of the ridge. And 17 these 140 guys were a symbolic Israeli presence to 18 validate Israel's previous ownership, and hopefully 19 ultimate future ownership, and it was one of those 20 cockamamie arrangements that was part of the armistice 21 treaty and this group of 140 men sat up there for two 22 weeks and played cards and twiddled their thumbs,

1 couldn't do any training, couldn't do anything. They 2 were in the trench. It was dreadful duty. You could 3 only keep them up there two weeks.

4 Every two weeks they came down under 5 supervision of a UN convoy team which escorted them 6 down the hill to the UN truck at the bottom which took 7 them away and replaced them with 140 other guys who 8 stayed up there for two weeks, so there was a 9 rotation.

10 The end of the story is that it took 11 several years for the 1,300 items to come down, one by 12 one by one, tucked under the shirts and jackets of the 13 rotating platoon. And every piece came down finally 14 to Israeli hands. At the end of the story Prof.
15 Scholem had the privilege of putting all the 16 manuscripts in the rare book room of the new campus at 17 Givat Ram, in West Jerusalem.

18 The last time I saw Scholem was a few 19 years ago before he died, and I said to myself I have 20 to make sure. I told him that I had seen a story once 21 in the Jerusalem Post by Abraham Rabinovitz who wrote 22 the story telling about the bringing down. I asked

1 Scholem: "did it all work out? Did you really get 2 them all in the end?" He said: "every last one." And 3 we shook hands and that was the end of the story and 4 it was the last time I ever saw him. So that's what 5 happened to the Offenbach manuscripts.

6 INTERVIEWER: Then you went on a national 7 barnstorming tour on behalf of UJA?

8 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes. I went back to 9 Denver, the original congregation. I went 10 barnstorming with Morgenthau who was the chairman, and 11 then again I went with Edward Warburg, the next 12 chairman. For the next eight years, I was a volunteer
13 chairman of the Speakers Bureau for the National UJA
14 and I was out three or four days a week, Monday
15 through Thursday. I got home for the weekend, 16 Shabbat. Anybody in my congregation who wants to get 17 married, we collect all the people and do it on 18 Sunday. Anybody wants to die, better do it on Sunday.
19 By Monday I'm off again and running. And eight years.
20 Twice in that interim they came and asked me if I 21 would become the professional director of the UJA and 22 I turned it down.

1 But then after a while Mr. Warburg and Mr.
2 Rosenwald who were the two ranking chairman of the 3 UJA, both from those aristocratic families, seriously 4 said, "Look, you must do this, there is nobody like 5 you, nobody has your background, nobody has your 6 experience in the United States, not only what you did 7 in Germany, but also what you have done here, the 8 public knows you now in every city in the country and 9 you know the leading big givers in every city in the 10 country. You've been talking to them as a volunteer, 11 now become our professional head." At the same time
12 there was a problem between the newly created Isael
13 Bond Organization, of which I was one of the founders 14 didn't see why there should be any fight in any 15 community between the UJA and the Bonds. That was a 16 very precious attitude to have because so few people 17 had it at the beginning. At the beginning there was 18 dreadful fear and competition.

19 One lay leader sticks in my mind as a man 20 who rose above it and that was Joseph Meyerhoff of 21 Baltimore. He was marvelous, and said: "The way I 22 will prove that there should be harmony is that I will

1 be the chairman of the UJA drive in Baltimore and I
2 will also be the chairman of the Bond drive in 3 Baltimore and I will do them both in the same year and 4 I will separate them in time so that they don't 5 impinge on each other." He was role model number one 6 of what a good lay leader should be. He and I trotted 7 around the country together for years, thereafter.
8 His son now is the Chairman of the Council of the 9 Holocaust Memorial Museum.

10 So the Bond organization needed somebody 11 to run it, and the UJA organization needed somebody to 12 run it, and the political leaders in Israel became 13 involved because this whole matter involved heavy 14 money. Levi Eshkol got into the act, and so did Nahum 15 Goldmann.

16 INTERVIEWER: Eshkol was the Finance
17 Minister and later Prime Minister?

18 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Yes. And Nahum Goldmann
19 was President of the World Zionist Congress following 20 Chaim Weizmann. So when the heavy weights got in and 21 came pressing on me I really couldn't say no. I had 22 shifted in the interim from being the congregation in

1 Denver to being the rabbi in Milwaukee. Messrs.
2 Warberg and Rosenwald came to Milwaukee, spoke to the 3 board and said you've got to release this man. The 4 Board agreed, as did I, and that was it. So I 5 switched over from being a volunteer to being the 6 executive, the CEO, of the UJA, and did that until the 7 '70s when we left and moved over to live in Israel for 8 a period of years, with every intention of remaining.
9 We were diverted because of some family illness and 10 wound up back in the U.S.

11 INTERVIEWER: Let me touch on two issues
12 we haven't touched on, on the European experience.
13 What was the attitude of the DP population toward the 14 Germans, and what was it like for them to live in 15 Germany? And let's start with that for a moment.

16 RABBI FRIEDMAN: It's really a serious
17 question and it's easily answered. The DPs lived 18 mostly in camps. There were no machine guns aimed at 19 them and there were no guards at the gates, but they 20 were in an encircled area, they were in a camp. A few 21 of them were out in the towns, living freely in rented 22 quarters among the German population. They were

1 comfortable doing that, but 95 percent were in camps.
2 They used to look through the wire around the camps
3 and they used to see Germans going on buses, carrying 4 little briefcases, going to work. The town was 5 working and everybody was living a normal existence
6 except they. They hated the Germans. They resented
7 them. They just would like to have torn every German 8 apart if they could get their hands on them. Now, 9 they could because as I said they were not confined,
10 they went out into the towns near which these camps
11 were located. They bought goods in the German stores.
12 They learned to speak German, many of them did. But 13 you could see the look in their eye and they hated 14 every German.

15 Every once in a while some episode would 16 flare up and you would see the expression of it in a 17 physical form of rebellion. And I'll just tell you 18 one story which illustrates many many similar things 19 that happened. It was in the camp at Landsberg.
20 Landsberg was the town where Hitler was in prison. In 21 that very same German Army barracks in which he was 22 imprisoned in 1925, when he wrote "Mein Kampf," are

1 now living Jewish displaced persons. So you can 2 imagine what an irony that was.

3 Okay, in this camp at Landsberg one day a 4 rumor spread through the camp that a Jewish child had 5 been kidnapped and killed by the Germans. Immediately 6 a riot started through the whole camp, and a wave of 7 people gushed out of gates of the camp into town and 8 started to break store windows, start buildings on 9 fire, over-turn buses, attack and pummel any German 10 passerby. Quickly the town turned into an armed camp.
11 The purpose of the Army was to keep law and order.
12 Here it was breaking down between Jews and Germans.
13 That's dynamite, that's incendiary.

14 So the Army pushed the Jews back into the 15 camp and closed the gates and padlocked them. Okay, 16 now you have U.S. troops ringed around and a couple of 17 .50 caliber machine guns are set up and a tank is 18 hovering delicately, in the background but present, 19 visibly present. And so the Jews start yelling 20 "Amerikanische SS, you American soldiers are acting 21 like the SS. Amerikanische are Nazis." Well, now the 22 lieutenant in charge of this platoon says whoa, whoa,

1 we're not Nazis and we're not here to hurt you, but 2 you can't come and tear up the town, and the dialogue
3 goes and the Jews boom!, burst out of the padlocked
4 camp once more and break the gates. Then the scuffle 5 starts between American troops and Jewish DPs and 6 Germans ringing around looking at it with great 7 pleasure.

8 INTERVIEWER: Now you guys have your 9 Jewish problems.

10 RABBI FRIEDMAN: 19 young fellows get 11 arrested. They were the ones at the front of the 12 crowd. So they were the activists, and one of them 13 has a knife in his pocket. Later when they're 14 arrested and they are brought into the police station 15 and one of them has got a piece of lead pipe in his 16 pocket, and one of them has got a hammer in his 17 pocket, and anything that could be used as a weapon, 18 okay. So they are charged with, I don't know what the 19 technicality of the charge is, but it's disturbing the 20 peace and it's inciting to riot. Nobody was murdered 21 and nobody was killed.

22 By then incidentally it is discovered that

1 the little boy who was missing was not dead, that 2 there was a hole in the fence at the back of the camp
3 going right into the woods, and he had gone out there 4 and he had wanted to do whatever, maybe he wanted to 5 smoke a cigarette, nobody knows, but nothing had 6 happened to the kid and the kid had come back in. And 7 so the rumor that had started the whole thing was of 8 course inaccurate. But by now you've got 19 young 9 Jewish fellows in the stockade.

10 Word of this gets back to the United 11 States. There was a Congressman from Illinois by the 12 name of Adolph Sabath, an old guy, he was about 80
13 years old. He informed the press and the Department 14 of War that he intended to go to Germany himself to 15 make sure that these Jews got an honest and fair
16 treatment from the American Army and the American Army 17 wasn't going to treat them like the Nazis did. And 18 he's shaking his fist in everybody's face.

19 Of course word of this gets back to 20 General Clay and this is exactly what he needs his 21 advisor for, so General Clay talks to Rabbi Bernstein, 22 who says to me, you go down to Landsberg, you sort

1 this thing out, you make sure that these guys get a
2 proper defense. They're in front of a court-martial
3 of seven officers, so it's going to have to be a 4 military officer who will have to defend them and 5 there will be a military prosecutor, and I want you 6 there as my personal representative, which means 7 General Clay's representative. You have all of my 8 authority and you report to the commanding officer 9 that you are there on my behalf so he knows who you 10 are and you follow this thing every step of the way 11 because this is dynamite.

12 Okay, the end of the story very quickly,
13 I went to the Judge Advocate General and I asked him
14 for the best lawyer he had in the United States Army.
15 And he tells me that the man who handles all death 16 sentences given by court-martial for murder, rape, all 17 the felony-one kind is a captain by the name of 18 Abraham Hyman, and I say fine, I want him.

19 Hyman said if I get mixed up in this DP
20 business I'll never get home for five years. I'm due 21 to be demobilized. I said Abe, come on, come on, come 22 on. And to make a long story short he came on and he

1 came down and he was the defense attorney and he 2 defended them brilliantly.

3 INTERVIEWER: And he didn't get home for 4 five years?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: He did not. He wound up
6 as the last, the final advisor when Foehrenwald, the 7 final camp, closed in 1950 Hyman, the last advisor, 8 went home finally in 1950. Abe Hyman, dedicated, 9 intelligent, passionate, faithful, was one of the 10 strong pillars upon whom the fate of thousands rested.
11 He has lived the past quarter century in Israel, loyal 12 to his ideals.

13 So anyhow, the trial ended. They were 14 given three months which was, you know, the admonitory 15 slap on the wrist with time off for good behavior. So 16 they probably might have served, you know, three 17 weeks, four weeks, something like that. However, 18 Hyman pleaded and obtained for them the right that 19 they should not be put in a prison with Germans, they 20 should not be put in a prison with American soldiers 21 in the stockade, they should be put in some separate 22 place where the Army can have a few guards and watch

1 over them. We found an old abandoned castle nearby, 2 quite nearby, so their families could come and visit
3 them, and within four weeks we had all 19 of them out 4 and on their way through the Aliyah Bet and they were 5 taken off Marseilles to a ship to Palestine and that 6 was the end of that.

7 INTERVIEWER: Let's touch on one more
8 question which is really more a historical question, 9 but also part of your own experience. July 4th 1946--

10
11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Oh, Kielce, the Kielce
12 Pogrom, is that the one you're referring to? Oh, that 13 was a bitter one, bitter, bitter, bitter. 42 Jews 14 were killed that day and the bodies were laid around 15 the fountain in the center of this little medieval 16 looking village, a beautiful little village, and the 17 bodies were like cord wood in a circle around the 18 fountain.

19 A ripple went through all of Europe, and 20 of course it reached Germany and Army Headquarters.
21 General McNarney who was the commander at that moment 22 said to Rabbi Bernstein, take my airplane, go over to

1 Warsaw, go to wherever you have to go, find out what's 2 going on there, find out what caused it, find out what 3 it's implications are, and what the consequences might 4 be, if any, for us here in Germany. Because he knew, 5 he was sophisticated enough to know that this was 6 going to trigger off another flood of people leaving 7 the east and trying to cross the border into Germany 8 where they would be safe.

9 We did, we went. Unbelievable. We went 10 to see the American Ambassador whose name was Arthur 11 Bliss Lane. There was only one hotel in Warsaw, the 12 Polonia, and it was half smashed. He had two rooms, 13 the American Ambassador had two rooms in this hotel.
14 That's all he had. No embassy. And he had gout and 15 his foot was up on a hassock and he was mean and he 16 was miserable. And he said listen, this has nothing 17 to do with me, don't talk to me about these Jews and 18 what happened in Kielce. It's not an American 19 problem, it's not an embassy problem, it doesn't 20 involve anything, it doesn't involve a consular 21 division, it doesn't involve reparations, nothing.
22 And probably whatever happened to them they damn well

1 deserved. That was his parting shot. Thank you, sir, 2 Mr. Ambassador, very much.

3 We went to see the Prime Minister, Mr.
4 Edward Osubka Moravska. Quite bland. He said:
5 Really, you know, there is some latent anti-semitism
6 among the Polish people, everybody knows that, that's 7 historic fact, I don't know what triggered it off, I 8 don't know what caused it, but it will die down the 9 way it always does. And I mean there is nothing that 10 the Polish government will or can or should do about 11 this. There are no culprits, we can't find anybody.

12
13 We went to see the Cardinal, Augustus
14 Cardinal Hlond, H-L-O-N-D, a bull-necked man, cropped
15 hair, tough as nails. He never asked us to sit down, 16 the whole interview was standing. And his attitude 17 was very simple. "These Jews brought Communism here.
18 The head of the Communist party running this country 19 is a Jew by the name of Yacob Berman. Whatever the 20 Polish people of the town of Kielce did to those Jews, 21 they did out of anger and fury and rage because the 22 Jews have put this anchor around our necks. And the

1 church will do nothing." We tried and we asked him if 2 he would write a pastoral letter which should be read
3 in every church and this would kind of put a blanket
4 on the fire. He wouldn't do it.

5 So our fourth visit we went to Mr. Berman, 6 and Yacob Berman said, "If the Jews are guilty of 7 having brought Communism here to Poland it's the best
8 thing that we could ever do for this country and I 9 will take whatever consequences. And furthermore, if 10 the consequences are that a few Jews get killed, well 11 a few Jews get killed. It's just a few more. We are 12 fighting for a whole new world. He was a Communist 13 ideologue and he believed it and he preached it. And 14 we're fighting for a whole new world means for 15 everybody and for a larger number of Jews, and even if 16 there were a few casualties there always are in war.

17 And the last point I want to make with you
18 gentlemen is that the Jews should remain here. If you 19 came from Germany from the American commander to find 20 out if the Jews here are going to flee, if I have 21 anything to do with it I will see to it that they will 22 leave this country naked and impoverished, they will go out

1 naked and barefoot because they shouldn't go out.
2 They should stay here in Polan to build a socialist 3 fatherland.

4 Well, you know, this was zero for four.
5 We had seen four people, the Ambassador, the Prime 6 Minister, the Cardinal, and then the Communist leader, 7 and got no sympathy from any of them. But then when 8 we started to go around and we began to talk to the 9 Haganah guys who were working in the towns and we 10 began to talk to ordinary Jews whom we were 11 recommended to, we got the picture that masses were 12 packing and leaving.

13 And we returned and we wrote the report to 14 McNarney that he could expect, that the military 15 command in Germany could expect over the period of the 16 next year to a year and a half approximately 150,000
17 people to come flooding in from the east to the west.
18 And the Army had better gear up for it and prepare for 19 it, and the Army would have a political decision to 20 make, not a military one as to whether the borders
21 should be closed or opened. And if you want to close 22 the borders and you want to try to prevent these Jews

1 from coming in then you're going to have to do it by 2 armed force or setting up barriers and blockades.

3 McNarney looked at that and said well,
4 whoa, this is way over my head. Rabbi Bernstein, go
5 to Washington please and talk to the President. A
6 decision about whether the border of Germany is open 7 or closed to 150,000 refugees is not for me to make.
8 So Phil did, he flew to Washington and 9 talked to Truman. It took about 15 minutes. He got 10 an immediate green light, and came right back. Okay, 11 McNarney has got a green light from the President, the 12 borders are open. So Eugene Lipman is on the 13 Czechoslovak border and the borders are all manned 14 with our Haganah people and that is what raised the 15 ultimate total to 250,000 people. It's just as simple 16 as that.

17 That was the final result of the Kielce
18 Pogrom. Those 42 victims triggered off a major 19 demographic shift. And the accumulation of that many 20 people in the camps in Germany itself became a fact of 21 the political weight. The episode of the Exodus 22 finally produced that vote in the United Nations on

1 November 29, 1947.

2 INTERVIEWER: Let me push this phase to 3 the close by asking a question. Where were you on May 4 14th 1948, or where were you on November 29th '47?

5 RABBI FRIEDMAN: I was in Denver November
6 29th '47. May 15th '48 I was shuttling between 7 Denver, New York and Wilmington, Delaware.
8 Wilmington, Delaware had to do with DuPont. New York 9 had to do with the Haganah headquarters in the United 10 States which was in a hotel, 14th East 60th Street.
11 Next door to the Copacabana nightclub.

12 The director of the Haganah in the United 13 States was Mr. Teddy Kollek, now the Mayor of 14 Jerusalem, a world famous figure. So Teddy had 15 reminded me, when I returned to the States, that I was 16 still in the Haganah and never mind I was running 17 around making speeches for the UJA, that's kid stuff.

18 As far as the Haganah is concerned he wanted me,
19 contrary to the embargo laws of the United States 20 Government, to buy, pack, ship out of the United 21 States all the dynamite, brick production, of DuPont
22 in Wilmington, Delaware. A brick is a brick, the size

1 of a brick, the size and shape of a brick, but this 2 brick is a piece of dynamite.

3 Now you take three of them, stack them up 4 one on top of each other, and take three more, one on 5 top of each other, and wire the six of them together
6 and attach the wire, whatever length you want, to a 7 detonator and you blow up that package. We called it 8 a satchel charge because you took the six bricks, put 9 them inside of a knapsack, you know, a canvas GI 10 knapsack, it looked like a little satchel, it should 11 have been called a knapsack charge more accurately, 12 and it will blow a hole in a stone wall or it will 13 blow a hole through an iron gate. And that was the 14 main artillery that the Israel Armed Forces had. It 15 didn't have any big artillery, heavy mortars or 16 howitzers.

17 So I was buying the dynamite, shipping it
18 to myself in Denver, trans-shipping it down to Tampico
19 in Mexico, buying vessels, getting the stuff on board 20 in cardboard cartons that said "Del Monte peaches, 21 fruit salad, pineapples." We stole the cartons from 22 Del Monte, California. And the ships were manifested

1 to the Far East, but when they went out of Tampico 2 they didn't turn and go through the Panama Canal to 3 the Far East. They went to the Mid East, in the other 4 direction.

5 So that's where I was all through '48.
6 '48 was a hell of a year with me and the FBI. But 7 everything came out okay. No charges, no nothing, and 8 a happy ending to the story.

9 INTERVIEWER: Herb, is there anything we 10 haven't touched?

11 RABBI FRIEDMAN: No, Michael. No, I think 12 we've covered the main things. But the summary of the 13 whole business is that you had a DP population that 14 had the patience and the stamina to overcome all of 15 the evil and the agony they had been through, all the 16 losses they had suffered, and who had the hope and the 17 faith in something they believed in that represented 18 their future. So the patience and the stamina, the 19 faith and hope characterized that DP population. With 20 all the hatred boiling in them, with all of the stuff 21 that many of them have never gotten out of their 22 systems for their whole lives, that's one element.

1 Then you've got the other supporting 2 elements. You've got the group, you've got the United 3 States Army, benevolent, friendly, cooperative. I
4 can't compliment them enough.

5 Number two, you've got the group of 6 American Jewish organizations that came in with money 7 and support.

8 Number three, you've got the Palestinian 9 personalities beginning with Ben Gurion himself and 10 the whole mechanism of the Haganah and their support 11 that they provided.

12 And then lastly you have won over world
13 public opinion so that you get that great ringing 14 majority vote of two when the resolution was finally 15 passed in November of '47. It won by two. The two 16 countries were the Philippines and Guatemala, great 17 big Democratic powers that pushed the ball over the 18 line.

19 But that was the combination. Now, we've 20 talked about the DPs themselves and we've talked about 21 the Army and we've talked about the JDC and the great 22 organizations. We've talked about the Haganah and the

1 Israelis. The world conscience, feeble as it was, did
2 its trick and the State was created.

3 And I sum that whole thing up when I think 4 of myself and my life and where I am now and what did 5 it all mean, I really believe the following statement, 6 and it may sound strange to you, those three years
7 from 1945 when the war ended until 1948 when the State 8 was established, those three years I think are the 9 most important single group of any three years in the 10 entire history of the Jewish people, I include every 11 single thing I can think of that the Jewish people has 12 been through since Abraham, I don't think there is 13 another period of three years which has ever been so 14 determinative. Because we came out of the death into 15 the life and those are the two extremes, death and 16 life. There aren't any others. There is nothing 17 similar.

18 Persecution and inquisition of this one or 19 that one, or running from one country, running from 20 another country, that's all blips on the screen. But 21 this is the definitive thing. We could have passed 22 off the stage of history. There's no doubt in my mind

1 about it. One third of the people dead in Europe, one 2 third of the people paralyzed and ineffective in 3 America during the crucial years, almost another third
4 of the people lost behind the Iron Curtain, you 5 couldn't get to them, they couldn't be useful or 6 helpful. The Jewish people almost died, I mean 7 totally and finally and irrevocably.

8 And out of that, three short years later 9 you find you're back into vibrancy and action and 10 you're winning a war. That's a miracle. I don't know 11 any other miracle, and I'm even talking about the 12 crossing of the Red Sea, and I'm talking about 13 anything else you want to mention, I don't know of 14 anything else that's comparable to it. So if I had 15 the z'chut, the merit, to live through those three 16 years, work my way through those three years, add 17 something, well then it was a life worth living. And 18 that's how I sum it up.

19 INTERVIEWER: A story worth telling.

20 RABBI FRIEDMAN: And a story worth 21 telling.

22 INTERVIEWER: Thank you.

1 RABBI FRIEDMAN: Thank you.

2 (Whereupon, the proceedings in the above-
3 entitled matter were concluded.)
