First, I want to reiterate my thanks to you and the staff of the UJA Federation for your help in making the most recent board meetings of CIJE a success. As always, the staff was very helpful and accommodating and the arrangements worked smoothly. In particular, Tzvi Mackson was extremely attentive and helpful with our audio-visual needs. I know how much is involved with 'behind the scenes' work to make any meeting a success, and thank you especially for your help.

I also wish to confirm our reservation of meeting space for Wednesday and Thursday, April 26-27, 1995 and for Wednesday and Thursday, November

1-2, 1995. Plans for April 26 and November 1 remain similar to what you outlined in your letter to me of August 23. In both cases, we will have a dinner meeting from 6:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. for approximately 15 people in the Rosenwald Room. This will be followed by a classroom style setup for approximately 100 people in Ballroom A and the Jesselson Room from 8:00 to 9:30 p.m. We would like to add a reception with coffee and cake from 7:30 to 8:00 p.m. probably in Ballrooms D, E, and F, and replenish the coffee and keep it available for participants following the conclusion of the

On Thursday, April 27 and Thursday, November 2, I would like to make the following revisions:

- 1. The initial reception and registration should be set up with coffee, tea, and mini danish to begin at 9:00 a.m., rather than 9:30 a.m.
- 2. A plenary session for approximately 60 people will begin at 10:00 a.m. We would like to hold the plenary in large Ballroom A and, if necessary, the Jesselson Room. We will require an open square table and have discovered that the Leff Room does not accommodate this arrangement. There will be a second plenary, which we would like to hold in the same space, in the afternoon, concluding at 4:00 p.m.

Bennett Yanowitz

- At some point between 11:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. the group will be divided into four subcommittees of no more than 20 people each. If we can have the Weiler and Rosenwald Rooms and two of Ballrooms D, E, and F, we can accommodate these groups because they will vary in size.
- 4. From noon until 1:00 p.m. we will want to serve the entire group (approximately 60) lunch at round tables of eight. I suggest that we use the Leff Room for this purpose. Is it big enough?
- 5. Food for the lunch will be the same as past meetings -- the Bronx Shore supplemented with fruit and cottage cheese. In addition, we would like to make soft drinks available throughout the afternoon and need to have pitchers of water and cups on the open square table at all times. There should also be coffee and tea in each of the four break out rooms during the period from 11:00 a.m. 3:00 p.m.
- 6. From 4:00 to 5:00 p.m. we will have a staff debriefing session of approximately 10 people, for which we need just a table and chairs. If we could keep the group on the second floor for that meeting it would be helpful, although not essential.

I will be back in touch to confirm again closer to the date of the next meeting. You and I agreed, though, that it would be useful for me to give you as much detail now as possible.

Again, thank you very much for your help in the past and the future.

Sincerely

Virginia F. Levi Associate Director

Hi Ginny

Here is my letter to Sarna. Please organize a letter from Mort.
I will have Robin fax you a "consultant" request.

Professor Jonathan Sarna NEJS Department Brandeis University Waltham, MA

Dear Jonathan.

I'm writing to follow up on our conversation of ten days ago. You will, of course, receive a formal letter of invitation from Mr. Mandel, the Chairman of the CIJE Board, but I just wanted to put down in writing some details.

We at the CIJE are very pleased that you have accepted our invitation to speak at the evening session on Wednesday, April 26, 1995 which precedes the CIJE Board meeting the next day. The session will take place at the office of UJA-Federation of New York, 130 East 59th Street in New York. It will hegin at 7:30 PM and conclude by 10:00 PM. Members of the staff (including me) would be happy to take you out to dinner, if your schedule permits it.

As you may know. CIJE is an independent organization dedicated to the revitalization of Jewish education across North America through comprehensive, systemic reform. In November 1990, the Commission on Jewish Education in North America released A Time to Act, a report calling for dramatic change in the scope, standards, and the quality of Jewish education on this continent. It concluded that the revitalization of Jewish education -- whatever the setting or age group -- will depend on two essential tasks: building the profession of Jewish education; and mobilizing community support for Jewish education. CIJE was established to implement the Commission's conclusions.

Created as a catalyst for change, CIJE promotes reform by working in partnership with individual communities, local federations and central agencies, continental organizations, denominational movements, foundations, and educational institutions.

The program on April 26th will be introduced by Mr. Mandel, and the audience will include members of the Board as well as a small group of selected guests. We anticipate that the audience will number around 30 to 50 people and it will be a chance to help shape the thinking of these important and influential figures-- both lay and professional-- in North American Jewish life.

We are interested, as you and I discussed, in your presenting the underlying thinking behind your Brown University talk about the late 19th Century American Jewish Awakening. We see your ideas here as powerful, indeed inspirational, about the possibility for change and renewal in a time of crisis, a time that in some ways resembles our own.

Obviously, your paper was designed for an academic audience, so for our essentially lay context the paper would need an appropriate focus and presentation. Having heard you speak in such situations in the past, I am sure that you will be able to adapt your remarks for our context. At this point we are trying to determine all the details of the program. But I imagine it will go something like this: Mr. Mandel will welcome the attendees. Then since our program falls on Erev Yom Hashoah, we will take a few moments for marking the occasion. Your presentation will follow. It should run around 30 minutes. I know this is somewhat less time than what you had at Brown, but it would be good if you could fit your remarks into that time frame.

After which there may be some formal response to your presentation or we may simply open it up to questions and discussion from the floor. We will, of course, let you know how this develops.

As to other details: We are able to provide you with an honorarium of $700 for your presentation plus airfare and local transportation (please hold on to receipts), with our thanks for making your time available to us. The program is scheduled to end at around 10:00 PM and if there is no flight available that you can make, we will put you up for the evening in a convenient hotel. You might want to look into available flights, if you want to get home that night. If you need an early start the next morning, we could put you up at one of the airport hotels. Just let me know.

Re: April Board Meeting Preparation

Ginny and I had a phone meeting today about preparation for the Board Meeting. We noted that we cannot go ahead with many of the administrative projects without some of the content oriented aspects of the meeting decided. She suggests that we dedicate part of Monday's staff meeting to discussion of the Board Meeting. She proposes a telecon from 12:00-12:40.

During this time, Ginny suggests we discuss:

- agenda for the board meeting
- · agenda for the executive committee meeting
- · agenda for the steering committee meeting
- theme for the seminar, board meeting

Although last time we picked on focus for both the seminar and board, Ginny noted that the theme for the board meeting may be the workplan, or building the profession which might not be an appropriate title for the content of Jonathan Sarna's talk.

- materials to be sent
  - --letter from MLM confirming meeting
  - --seminar invitation (to whom?)
  - --documents to be sent out in advance

Ginny will not be in the office tomorrow because she is taking a computer class (along with Carol and Joan, but the CIJE Cleveland answering machine is working again). I need to let her know Monday morning if she will be taking part in the meeting at 12:00 so...please let me know by Monday morning if you think this plan will work.

an interesting note:

Ginny also told me that she worked out a deal with UJA/Federation that we could stay in our already reserved rooms the day of the board meeting but we have to end at 3:00 pm instead of the usual 4:00 pm.

Phone calls to Board members

Attached is a list dividing the invitees to the 3:00 pm meeting on Thursday, April 27 among us. I suggest that you ask to speak with the secretary and speak directly with the board member only if there is no secretary or s/he prefers that you do so.

Here's more or less what to say (but try not to sound like you're reading it);

"You should have received, or be receiving today, an invitation (to Mr./Mrs. _____) to the CIJE Board meeting scheduled for Thursday, April 27. Enclosed with that letter was a separate invitation to a meeting scheduled to begin at 3:00 PM, immediately following the Board meeting. Unfortunately, the letter listed the date of that meeting as Thursday, April 26. I am calling to clarify that the meeting is, indeed, Thursday, the 27th. I would appreciate your checking your (his/her) calendar to be sure that you have it on the right date. We look forward to seeing you (him/her) there."

If anyone asks, the meeting will be at UJA/Federation, 130 E. 59th St., New York, Weiler Room, and will conclude promptly at 4:00 pm.

Call fyou have any questions. I'd like to get this done today.

Dear 5~:

On April 26, 1995, CIJE will hold its second Jewish Education Seminar for board members and invited guests. Dr. Jonathan Sarna, Braun Professor of American Jewish History at Brandeis University, will interpret for us his ground-breaking historical study of the great American Jewish awakening that led to the founding of the core institutions of our community today. Against a backdrop of despair about the Jewish future, this revitalization transformed Jewish life.

Dr. Sarna's fascinating retrieval of this seminal era of American Jewish history presents ideas that are powerful-indeed, inspirational-about the possibility of change and renewal in a time of crisis, a time that in many ways resembles our own.

The Seminar will take place on the evening of Wednesday, April 26, 7:45 p.m., at UJA/Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, 130 East 59th St., New York.

As April 26 is the evening of Yom HaShoah, the program will begin with a Holocaust commemoration arranged by the composer Elizabeth Swados.

I hope you will be able to join us. Please complete and return the enclosed reply form.

With best wishes.

Dear 5~:

I am delighted to let you know that our forthcoming Board Meeting will begin with a second education seminar for CIJE Board Members and invited guests. Our presenter will be Dr. Jonathan Sarna, Braun Professor of American Jewish History at Brandeis University.

Dr. Sarna will interpret for us his ground-breaking historical study of the great American Jewish awakening that led to the founding of the core institutions of our community today. Against a backdrop of despair about the Jewish future, this revitalization transformed Jewish life.

Dr. Sarna's fascinating retrieval of this seminal era of American Jewish history presents ideas that are powerful--indeed, inspirational--about the possibility of change and renewal in a time of crisis, a time that in many ways resembles our own.

We have scheduled a dinner meeting of the Executive Committee to precede the seminar with Dr. Sarna. The dinner will take place at 6:00 p.m., followed by the Seminar at 7:45 p.m. on the evening of Wednesday, April 26, at New York UJA/Federation, 130 East 59th St., New York.

As April 26 is the evening of Yom HaShoah, the evening program will begin with a Holocaust commemoration arranged by the composer Elizabeth Swados.

The following day's Board Meeting will build on the strong response to the data on the background and professional training of teachers in Jewish schools previewed at the October meeting and presented at the GA by Dr. Adam Gamoran and Dr. Ellen Goldring. The Board Meeting of April 27, also at UJA/Federation, will begin promptly at 9:30 a.m.; refreshments will be served from 9:00 a.m. We will conclude at 3:00 p.m.

These data, incorporated in the CIJE Policy Brief, have been of considerable interest to Jewish communities around the country and have received a great deal of media attention. As you know, the CIJE Study of Educators juxtaposed the severe lack of training of most teachers with an unexpected degree of commitment and stability, making a powerful case for communal investment in educators now in the field.

How can our North American Jewish community meet the challenge of creating serious, comprehensive in-service training to improve the quality of teaching?

Among the issues we will explore in our April meeting are:

- What can be learned about the most effective in-service training for teachers from the field of general education? We will hear from an expert who has studied "success stories" of comprehensive professional development for teachers.
- How can professional growth for educational leaders support the revitalization of Jewish schools? We will hear a report on The CIJE- Harvard Leadership Institute, the first in North America to join the expertise of Harvard University's Principals' Center with outstanding Jewish scholars and educators from a range of denominations and communities to focus on issues of educational leadership.
- As communities begin to formulate their action plans for improving their educating personnel, what are some of the local initiatives in which CIJE is involved, and what can be their national implications? We will learn about programs now being launched which provide a range of models that other communities and institutions could replicate.
- What kind of partnerships are possible-locally and nationally-to spearhead the professionalization of teachers currently in the field? New examples of such partnerships will be presented at the meeting.

With the growing focus on in-service training, how will communities find the expertise they need to create comprehensive in-service initiatives? On April 27, we will explore the critical question of how to build the national capacity for training in this effort to transform the quality of teaching in Jewish classrooms around the country.

Finally, we will also have the opportunity to hear about an application of the Goals Project to a specific institution—the establishment of a new community high school.

We will soon be sending you advance materials as background for the meeting. In the meanwhile, please complete and return the enclosed reply form.

With best wishes,

Dear Mort:

I thank you for the invitation to the April 26th meeting of the Council for Initiatives in Jewish Education. I am only sorry that I previously agreed to keynote the Board Institute for the Federation in Allentown, Pennsylvania. Consequently, I will be out of town. The program seems potentially interesting.

Would it be possible for me to send 1 or 2 other persons from UJA-Federation. I would appreciate you letting me know whether that will be possible.

Thank you again for the invitation.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

Dear Mort:

I have received the information about the upcoming meeting for CIJE Board members. In addition, I received your note about the discussion of ideas regarding the financial situation of CIJE.

While I know that the topics of discussion are very important, my schedule does not allow me to make it to New York on the selected dates. The presenters sound very interesting and I am sorry to have to miss the meeting.

If there is anything that I can do to contribute to the meeting from Milwaukee, please feel free to let me know. Best wishes for a successful meeting and I hope you have a good attendance.

Dear Mort,

I very much appreciate your invitation to attend the April 26th Jewish Education Seminar in New York. I have great admiration for Jonathan Sarna, and would have made every effort to attend, but I will be traveling, first in Washington and then in Bogota, Colombia during that entire week. I must say that the program sounds most interesting, and I regret having to miss it.

I am, however, looking forward to our visit together in Cambridge on Saturday, April 22nd. I understand that we are meeting for coffee at the Hyatt Regency at 4:30 in the afternoon. We have so many interests and concerns in common, and I know our conversation will be far-ranging and stimulating.

Many thanks once again for your kind invitation. I look forward to seeing you on April 22nd, and close with very best wishes for a joyous Passover.

Sincerely

Jehuda Reinharz

CONTENT AND PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Committee members who have not responded up to this point

√Bill Berman

I called his office today and am waiting to hear back.

Chaim Botwinick

He has budget hearings all day at his Federation and will not be able to make it at all.

Allan Finkelstein

I spoke with his office and got a message back from him. He may be at the evening seminar, but probably will not. As to the board meeting itself, he will be there for at least part of the day.

Henry Koschitzky

Since I have never seen or met Koschitzky in all my CIJE years, my view is that I should not call him until Alan or Mort decides what his status is going to be.

David Sarnat

I spoke with his secretary (he was out of the office today). According to her, Sarnat will be at both the seminar and the board meeting.

Richard Scheuer

I called his office and discovered he no longer has an office there. They gave me his home phone number (914)-834-3546. I called there and am waiting to hear back from him.

Isadore Twersky

He should go on to Gail's call list, if he needs to be called at all—he certainly will be coming to the board meeting. I doubt that he will be at the seminar.

RESEARCH AND EVALUATION COMMITTEE

I took the following:

David Arnow

I spoke with David today. He seemed basically inclined to comeand stated that "barring unforseen circumstances" he would be there.

He is out of LA until Wednesday.

DATE: April 6, 1995

Much has transpired since our last Board Meeting in October, when our consultants Dr. Adam Gamoran, of the University of Wisconsin, and Dr. Ellen Goldring, of Vanderbilt University, presented a preliminary report of The CIJE Study of Educators.

As you know, the initial findings of this study juxtaposed the severe lack of training of most teachers in Jewish schools with an unexpected degree of commitment and stability, making a strong case for far more comprehensive inservice education for teachers in the field than currently exists.

The first CIJE Policy Brief, which summarized these findings, was presented at the GA and has subsequently received widespread media attention. In preparation for the April Board Meeting, I am enclosing another copy of the policy brief and a selection of the articles and citations CIJE's work has received. The majority of our media coverage has focused on the policy brief, the 1994 GA Forum that presented the study to the Jewish community, and the implications of the study for Jewish education, locally and continentally. In addition, CIJE, its chair, and staff have been cited as sources of expertise in articles on Jewish education.

At our October meeting, the Board Committee on Community Mobilization emphasized the importance of "telling the CIJE story" and of conveying our distinct strategic approach to revitalizing Jewish education. The chart that accompanies the press selections shows that the CIJE study was a subject of interest across the country, in large as well as smaller Jewish communities. We receive ongoing requests for the policy brief and have begun discussions with an increasing number of communities interested in conducting their own educators' study and building the profession of Jewish education. At the upcoming board meeting, I will report on our plans to expand our work to several new communities this year.

Executive Director

David Teutsch

Isadore Twersky

Bennett Yanowitz

We are continuing to consult with our laboratory communities. Following the results of the educators' study, they have embarked on creating Personnel Action Plans built around the strengths and gaps in their educators' training.

In partnership with those communities, CIJE has begun a number of innovative pilot projects in the area of personnel that build on some pioneering work in general education on the most effective way to enhance the professional training of teachers and educational leaders in the field. The CIJE-Harvard Leadership Institute, held in the fall, was one such project; others, on early childhood and the regional training of teachers for advanced degrees will begin in 1995.

In the process of planning and implementing these projects, we have recognized the need for a systematic way to train "mentor" educators--those who are qualified to construct and oversee comprehensive teacher training programs in local communities. CIJE is committed to building a national capacity for such teacher trainers, so that communities who want to upgrade their educational personnel can call on outstanding expertise. Dr. Gail Dorph will discuss this in greater detail at the board meeting.

To complement the work in this area, CIJE will be publishing a brief on Best Practices in Inservice Training, which will summarize current research in general and Jewish education on teachers' professional development, as a guide for local schools and communities committed to improving the knowledge and skills of their educators.

CIJE's platform for change depends on two conditions: the need to build the profession of Jewish education, with the training, career tracks, salary, benefits, and prestige that a true profession requires; and the corresponding need to mobilize community support and create champions for Jewish education who can be its advocates in their own communities and on a continental scale.

The North American Jewish community has entered a critical stage of reflection and analysis about its future. The sphere of Jewish education requires not only new approaches but also new formulations of purpose; not only "How can we create excellence in Jewish education?" but "Why must we?"

The Goals Project was designed to address, on an institutional and communal level, the question of: What kind of Jews do we want to create through Jewish education? Since the Goals Seminar in the summer of 1994, which brought together lay and professional leaders and educators from several communities to work together, CIJE has been involved in a series of seminars and training projects, under the direction of our consultant from the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Daniel Pekarsky, that will continue throughout 1995 and further. (One such seminar is the subject of an article in the enclosed packet.) I look forward to bringing you up-to-date on future goals work in the areas of the communal high school and institutional and

In the Best Practices Project, directed by Dr. Barry Holtz, we will soon be adding Best Practices in JCCs to our volumes on preschools and supplementary schools. We continue to present seminars for educators and lay leaders on creating excellence in the supplementary school, and have begun to document selected topics in the areas of day schools, beginning with the role and teaching of the Hebrew language. Issues we will address in the best practices realm include how other institutions can learn from the best practices models of success and a study of the process by which an institution becomes a best practice setting—which is of great interest to practitioners in the field.

Finally, CIJE has reaffirmed its commitment to one of the most underdeveloped areas in Jewish education: building a research capacity. In this decade, during which the Jewish community and its leadership are allocating increasing resources to a range of Jewish educational projects, the question of educational evaluation is becoming urgent. As institutions and communities consciously set goals for Jewish education and Jewish continuity, it will become imperative to establish indicators by which success and failure can subsequently be measured, so that the entire North American community can learn from each other in order to transform Jewish education for the coming generations.

CIJE consultants Drs. Gamoran and Goldring are overseeing a plan designed to address this critical issue. The monitoring, evaluation, and feedback domain will also be evaluating CIJE's own projects, as well as publishing policy-oriented research to meet the needs of those who plan, fund, and implement Jewish education.

I look forward to seeing you at the April 27th Board Meeting, which will begin promptly at 9:30 am and conclude at 3:00 pm at UJA/Federation, 130 E. 59 St., New York.

With best wishes for a joyous Passover,

RE: APRIL 27 COMMITTEE MEETING

4/11/95

At our October meeting, Drs. Adam Gamoran and Ellen Goldring presented the findings of the CIJE Study of Educators on the background and training of teachers in the three laboratory communities. These findings suggested the importance of creating serious ongoing professional development opportunities for teachers. Our committee recommended that CIJE design a plan to address this challenge. A first version of that plan will be presented at our committee meeting, where we will have time to review and discuss it.

Included with this memo are two items:

- An update of CIJE's recent activities in the domain of building the profession. You will hear more about some of these initiatives during the board meeting itself.
- 2. A short piece from a recent issue of the New York Times that raises the critical need for ongoing professional development opportunities for teachers. Although written about general educational settings, this article addresses many of the issues and challenges we have been discussing in the area of building the profession of Jewish education.

This is a very important meeting; I hope to see you there.

CIJE Building The Profession

UPDATE From October, 1994 through April, 1995

Building National Teacher Education Capacity

CIJE has been developing a plan to create a cadre of "Mentor-Educators" who can work with communities and institutions both to develop and to implement In-Service offerings on the local level. A national task force of experts will plan and serve as the faculty for the first cohort of participants. This first cohort will then become part of the faculty of this College Without Walls and will participate in educating future cohorts.

This first cohort will be made up of educators who have extensive Judaica background, years of experience in the field of Jewish education and experience helping others learn to teach. A seminar for this group cohort is being planned for this summer.

Developing Pilot Initiatives at the National Level

CIJE and the Harvard Principals' Center developed a seminar for educational leaders on "Building a Community of Leaders: Creating a Shared Vision." The seminar was designed to bring together educational leaders across denominations and across settings (pre-school, supplementary school, and day school). Over fifty educational leaders participated in the seminar taught by educators and scholars, such as, Roland Barth, Terence Deal, Arthur Green, Ellen Goldring, and Isadore Twersky. In the three lead communities, the educators who participated in the seminar continue to meet together to discuss substantive shared issues. These meetings have included sharing the ways in which they have adopted and adapted the materials and strategies learned at the seminar in their own settings. Often these sessions have been facilitated by the central agency and lead community professionals who also attended the Harvard seminar.

Development of Communal Personnel Action Plans

Each of the lead communities has been involved in the development of a comprehensive personnel action plan. The logistics of the planning process has taken a unique form in each community. In all three cases, educational professionals are key players in the process. CIJE has been assisting communities in this work by consulting on the process, co-planning meetings and sometimes attending meetings as well.

In order to provide guidance and information as well as to facilitate cross community feedback, CIJE has held two consultations in December and March with another planned for May. Each of these consultations was structured around an issue critical to the development of these action plans. Educational papers were mailed out before and after.

In preparation for the December consultation, Dr. Gail Dorph and Dr. Barry Holtz prepared an outline of a generic personnel action plan along with planning tools to facilitate the use of the outline. Because the format was so fruitful, a longer (two day) consultation was planned for March.

In March, Dr. Dorph supplied communities with a working paper outlining what is currently considered "best practices" in In-Service education in general education. In addition, Holtz and Dorph suggested a strategy for using the guide to both evaluate current in-service offerings and design new programs.

The March consultation also provided an opportunity for representatives of the denominations to present their thinking about the arena of in-service education. Participants included: Rabbi Robert Hirt and Dr. Alvin Schiff of Yeshiva University, Dr. Kerry Olitzky of Hebrew Union College, Dr. Robert Abramson of United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism and Aharon Eldar of the Torah Department of the World Zionist Organization. In the discussion which ensued, lead community representatives were also able to share the issues with which they are struggling. These include:

- 1. How do we induct new teachers into the system?
- 2. How do we develop supervisors and mentors to provide on-site guidance and support to teachers?
- 3. How do we provide for on-going professional development for our educational leaders?
- 4. How do we create standards for our teachers in all of our settings, but particularly in supplementary and early childhood settings?

The May consultation will be devoted to a discussion of the CIJE Study of Educators findings about the educational leaders in our communities and the implications of these findings for personnel action planning.

Development of Pilot Initiatives in Communities

CIJE has been involved in the planning of two pilot initiatives in building the profession, one in Milwaukee and one in Baltimore.

In Milwaukee, the personnel action team's first decision in the creation of a personnel action plan has been the decision to create a local/regional opportunity for its educators to gain a masters degree in Jewish studies with a concentration in education. Milwaukee has received a grant from the Bader foundation to partially fund a masters program that will be run by the Cleveland College of Jewish Studies. The program will include courses in Milwaukee taught by the Cleveland College faculty, video-conference courses, and summer courses in Cleveland at the college. The program will be housed at MAJE (the Milwaukee Association for Jewish Education) which will also coordinate and co-staff the internship program. At this date, the program has been funded.

In Baltimore, a plan is being developed to create a model program for early childhood educators. The program will be geared to the enhancement of the Jewish content of early childhood programs in a limited number of settings. The program will include both teachers and directors of the institutions chosen to participate. Breishit: In the Beginning: Machon L'Morim for Jewish Early Childhood Educators comes at the initiation of the Children of Lyn and Harvey Meyerhoff Foundation and is being funded by the foundation.

Professional Meetings and Presentations

Drs. Holtz and Dorph have made presentations at the General Assembly (November) and at the Jewish Educators Association Conference (March) on "Using Best Practices to Improve Your Supplementary School." At the JEA, they also reported on the findings and implications of the CIJE Study of Educators. These presentations were well attended. Participants responses indicate the importance of both of these projects to both lay and professional leaders.

Where We Stand

By Albert Shanker, President American Federation of Teachers

Beyond Magic Bullets

ducators are always looking for a magic builtet—a hot, new idea that will take care of all the problems with our education system. That accounts for the love affair with vouchers and market schools. EA1-type ventures into privatization and, most recently, charter schools. And we can be sure that next year it will be something else. Like people who are always eager to try the latest miracle diet, they think that the next fix will be the one that finally turns things around.

But these fads don't get to the heart of the educational enterprise. If we want to change our schools for the better, we have to change what goes on in the classroom between teachers and students. There is nothing revolutionary about this idea: It is common sense. It is also extremely difficult to do. Leon Lederman's recent description of Teachers Academy for Math and Science (TAMS), a privately funded organization providing in-service training to elementary school teachers in Chicago, shows what is involved (The Sciences, January-February 1995).

Letterman, a Nobel laureate in physics and demanding, director emeritus of the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory who now works with TAMS, believes that good early training in science and math opens some important doors for children:

resonate with their own natural curiosity and open a door to the joy of learning... A positive introduction to the study of science and mathematics serves as a foundation for an interest in those topics throughout a person's lifetime. And as for the relevance of the curriculum, the engines that drive the changes in contemporary society are science and science-based technology.

If none of this will happen—indeed kids are likely to be turned ul none of this will happen-indeed kids are likely to be timed of math and science—if they don't have reachers who know these disciplines and how to guide children in learning them. And the sad truth is that many elementary school teachers do not have the background to do a good job. This is no reflection or their hard work or devotion. They are victims of poor preparation and a system that frustrates their efforts to learn and change while they are on the job instead of supporting these efforts. In Japan, as Lederman points out teachers spend nearly half their time working together to improve the lessons they teach and the way they teach them, and there is ample money to support professional development activities. In the U.S., however, teachers seldom have a chance to consult with their peers about their teaching, and little or no money is spent on helping them upgrade their skills and knowledge: Lederman says the figure is usually less than I percent in Chicago. The problem of pour instruction in math and science is especially acute in an urban school system where expectations tend to be low—and, tragically, where youngsters have the most to gain from excellent instruction.

But, Lederman says, TAMS shows how, given the time and resources, teachers can learn the skills they need—and are elated by the process

In the past four years we have introduced seventy-two schoots and some 3,200 teachers to our program—and some of them have been with us for as many as three years. On average, they have received roughly 120 hours of instruction in veience. 140 hours in mathematics and more than 140 hours of additional close teaching supervision. That leaves only...420 schools and 14,000 teachers to go.

Changing culture is never easy. That so much time and effort (and money) are needed should be no surprise to the funding agencies, but it is. We estimate that to sustain the efforts we have begun in Chicago will probably take an investment of between $3,000 and $4,000 a year per teacher for perhaps three to four years.... The total is equivalent to the tuition for one year at a mid-priced university. Yet one of the curious and inexplicable frustrations of our work has been the difficulty of getting the money to sustain it.

Does the program work? Yes! Teachers love it. And when it is well managed, it creates an intense, joyous learning process. Such interventions also lead to a greatly energized teaching corps, in which the new teaching style spreads to other subjects and brings with it technology that can fruitfully enhance the teacher's effectiveness.

This is not flashy stuff. It is basic common sense. It is also fough, demanding and expensive, and it takes time—which may explain why educators often ignore this kind of thing in favor of quick-fix schemes. Lederman does not believe that schools can, by themselves, mount programs to bring about necessary changes in teaching and learning, and he may be right. But there are signs that the public is becoming skeptical of reforms that substitute flash and dazzle for attention to basic issues, and I believe and hope that reforms like the one he describes will increasingly find powerful public support.

Your lecture was enlightening, stimulating and even inspirational. Our board members, staff and invited guests expressed a great deal of praise about your talk and you left all of us with much to think about.

I hope that the efforts of our late-19th Century predecessors will serve as a model for the visionary leadership and creativity that our community needs today. Thank you once again. I wish you well in your work at Brandeis.

Dear FIELD(Salutation):

I wanted to let you know how sorry I am that you were not able to attend the CIJE board meeting last week. We missed the contribution you would have made--and missed being able to tell you of CIJE's superb progress.

Our board seminar, which took place on the preceding evening, began with a powerful commemoration for Yom HaShoah, presented by the composer Elizabeth Swados and her singers. We were then privileged to hear Dr. Jonathan Sarna, Braun Professor of American Jewish History at Brandeis University, describe the transformation of the American Jewish community at the end of the nineteenth century. Dr. Sarna drew fascinating parallels between the successful revitalization of the community then and the challenges and opportunities of our day.

It was with particular pride that I welcomed the board and committee members to the board meeting on the following day. As we heard our executive director, Alan Hoffmann, give an overview of CIJE activities, I realized how far we have come since CIJE was created in 1990 to implement the recommendations of the Commission on Jewish Education in North America.

Five years ago, we hoped it would be possible for a new organization to serve as architect for the transformation of Jewish education. That transformation would be effected by building a genuine profession of Jewish education and by mobilizing community support for this effort. Because there was virtually no hard data on the state of the profession, we launched The CIJE Study of Educators, directed by consultants Drs. Adam Gamoran and Ellen Goldring.

The powerful data we extracted on the background and training of Jewish teachers led to the first CIJE Policy Brief, documenting teachers' serious lack of professional training. At the board meeting, CIJE staff member Dr. Gail Dorph outlined those attributes of outstanding in-service training that recent studies in general education have shown to be effective in upgrading teachers in the field. The CIJE board was then presented with five wide-ranging examples of initiatives that, in different ways, "reimagine the profession of Jewish education" by offering Jewish educators and leaders serious, substantive professional development.

We heard first about two pilot programs that local communities are launching as a result of the CIJE Educators Survey data. Genine Fidler, vice chair of Baltimore's CIJE committee, described "Machon L'Morim," an intensive two-year program for the professional development of early childhood educators in Baltimore, funded by the Children of Harvey and Lyn Meyerhoff Philanthropic Fund. Louise Stein, co-chair of Milwaukee's Lead Community Project, reported on the establishment of the Milwaukee Master Educator Program, a long-distance learning partnership between the Cleveland College of Jewish Studies and the Milwaukee community. This Masters degree program in Jewish studies, supported by the Helen Bader Foundation of Milwaukee, is designed for Milwaukee's Jewish teachers and will take advantage of the pioneering technology of videoconferencing.

We then received reports on three CIJE-led pilot projects:

- 1. The Harvard-CIJE Institute for Educational Leaders: The institute was a groundbreaking program for principals and school directors held in Fall 1994 at the Harvard Principals' Center. Cheryl Finkel, head of the Epstein School in Atlanta, spoke about the lasting impact of the institute on the participants from Atlanta and the changes that resulted in the school communities to which they returned.
- 2. "Transforming the Supplementary School Educator": To our delight, the Nathan Cummings Foundation has made a three-year grant to CIJE to develop "mentor trainers" for the professional development of teachers in the congregational schools. Dr. Barry Holtz, of the CIJE staff, reported on the three parts of this grant: the education of the "mentor trainers," who will then be able to go into communities to lead teacher-training programs for educators currently in the field; the creation of a set of videos that will demonstrate excellent teaching in the supplementary school classroom as a model for teachers who want to implement the new skills and ways of thinking they acquire; and a handbook for those undertaking to conduct teacher training that will consolidate the curriculum and learning process for replication in communities across the country.
- 3. "Teachers Teaching Teachers": A program designed for day school teachers that will allow the creation of teacher networks, through which teachers of like subject matter, settings, experience or student age groups will be able to learn from one another. Again, we know from general education that the best professional development programs are those that enable teachers to learn from their peers in an ongoing way about new concepts and methods of teaching.

After our committee meetings, we resumed with a presentation by CIJE consultant Dr. Daniel Pekarsky on the importance of goals in educational planning. Dr. Pekarsky reminded us that although the reflective process of thinking about an institution's goals has been seen by some as a luxury, it is actually of the utmost practical importance. He pointed out that if you know what your goals are, you can make better educational decisions for your institution; that if you do not know what your goals are, you cannot evaluate your successes and failures; and that if today Judaism is a choice, people will choose it because they believe that Jewish existence is meaningful. And yet that choice doesn't happen spontaneously. Jewish educational institutions and communities need to ask and answer the question: What kind of Jew do we want to produce? What kind of Judaism can we offer that will be at the heart of people's lives?

To exemplify Dr. Pekarsky's point, Michael Rosenzweig, a leader of the Atlanta Jewish community who is among those spearheading the effort to create a new community high school in Atlanta, spoke about the Goals consultation held in February for about 70 lay people in Atlanta and staffed by CIJE. Rather than beginning the conversation about creating a new school in the customary way, by examining costs and site, the Goals consultation addressed the Jewishness of the proposed school. Michael described the transforming impact of the discussion, during which people in the community could work together, in an atmosphere of seriousness and purpose, to talk about the kind of Jews they wanted their children to be, and how a diverse range of people could nevertheless come together to move forward on the goals they realized they indeed shared.

Michael Rosenzweig's testimony was a moving end to a remarkable day. We concluded with a stirring Dvar Torah by CIJE board member Gershon Kekst.

For me personally, I cannot easily express my feelings as I saw many years of effort on all our parts bear fruit in such concrete and lasting ways. By the next board meeting, November 2, 1995, we will all know more about CIJE's efforts to "build capacity" for the training of Jewish educators and the orientation toward goals that are the bedrock of our effort to transform the profession of Jewish education. As is now our tradition, on the preceding evening, November 1, we will present our third CIJE board seminar. I hope to see you at both.

With best wishes for a wonderful summer.
