RABBINIC REFLECTIONS

I am not much of a bike rider. From time to time I do attempt to ride but, thankfully, not too often. After a long ride, which I define as half an hour, my legs begin to hurt and I get winded. Also, the bicycle seat seems to be a bit too small for my posterior. Yet, bicycle riding is probably one of the simplest motions in all of sports. Basically, all you have to do is pedal, steer and make sure you don't fall down.

Bike riding generally does not involve the same skill level as basketball, football, tennis, baseball, and other competitive sports, which require not only a simple motion, but also dexterity and some athletic ability. Even track and field events involve a certain amount of physical aptitude. In track and field, timing is important as well as the ability to precisely sense the movements of your body in juxtaposition to everyone else.

Bike riding not only involves the simplest of motions, but you also have the advantage of the bike to help you succeed, whereas in walking and running it is you against the world with nothing in between to negotiate gravity.

Even though competitive biking could be considered somewhat boring, tens of millions of people across the world took tremendous delight in Lance Armstrong's winning of his seventh Tour De France. This accomplishment is considered one of the greatest in all recorded sports... especially because Lance Armstrong's personal story is so compelling. This is a man who was afflicted with cancer; he was able to overcome so many difficult obstacles in order to achieve his singular lofty goal. His name has become synonymous with courage and superhuman effort.

So even though bicycle riding requires the simplest of movements, attaining simplicity in many of life's pursuits is often difficult. Lance Armstrong proved that simple is not so simple. With the simplest of movements, he was able to rivet the attention of the entire world to a sport that is often relegated to the back burner of the sports page. He overcame the complex vicissitudes of life by mastering the rudimentary rotation of his legs.

Judaism also encourages the simple path in life. Even though Judaism can be a highly intricate faith, especially when considering its dauntingly intellectual demands, still the actual practice of the tradition, and what the tradition demands of the adherent, can be quite simple. Two thousand years ago, Rabbi Tarfon stated that to teach someone a complex task might be easier than teaching someone simply how to relate to others. In the book of Deuteronomy, which we are reading this month, we find this quotation, "For this commandment which I command thee this day, it is not too hard for thee, neither is it far off. It is not in heaven that thou shouldest say, 'Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, and make us to hear it, that we may do it?' Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, 'Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, and make us to hear it, that we may do it?' But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it."

We sometimes encounter people who are capable of solving a complex mathematical equation but who are incapable of simply appreciating the world around them.

In the famous story of Rabbi Hillel, when he was asked to summarize Judaism in one sentence, he simply said, "Love thy neighbor and all the rest is commentary." In other words, he distilled the essence of our tradition into the simplest of injunctions.

Sometimes we forget that the simplest path, the straightest path, is the most productive one. So we bask in Lance Armstrong's glory because he took the simplest of motions and raised it to an art form that we can all appreciate. And in this we learn that our humanness depends more on how we first master the basic rubrics of our existence rather than feeling that we need to become perfect in those aspects of life that are far beyond our control.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

MARILYN WEINSTEIN president@harsinai.org

For many people August was a vacation month, filled with relaxation and renewal. I hope that you had a good summer and will take full advantage of the remaining warm days ahead. August was a special time for Har Sinai as well, but on vacation we were not! The summer here was filled with activity with membership renewals, planning the school year, committee meetings on all topics and continued work on our moving plans. We have exciting plans ahead for the coming year, some of which I'd like to share with you now.

We are making real progress on the Route 31 building project. Nancy LaPosta and her committee have engaged specialists to cover all aspects of the next phase of zoning approvals, which include a number of different environmental studies required by Hopewell Township. The Pre-Construction Committee includes some of Har Sinai's most dedicated members. When a meeting is called (and there are many of them!), everyone either attends or calls in with his or her updates and views on the current issues. The underlying message is that every member of the Committee cares very deeply about Har Sinai and its future. The Campaign Finance and Campaign Fund Raising Committees are also finalizing budget and financing plans as part of the moving/closing process. These committees are all making a concerted effort to insure that there is communication between each piece of this important endeavor, so that we all go forward together. We hope to be able to take the next step, getting site zoning approval (which includes the above environmental clearances), by the Fall of this year. If we make that timetable, we still expect to close on the Route 31 site in either late 2005 or early 2006. Our goal is to have the new school and multi-purpose room completed by Fall, 2006.

The Pre-Construction Committee has also begun coordinating the building programming phase, meaning the actual planning of the "insides" of the building that will become our religious school and worship space. This includes scoping out the number and size of future classrooms, offices, the structure of the multi-purpose room, a library, etc. This is being done with the help of various Committees and Temple staff who are involved in each of these areas. When this task is completed, we will have architectural drawings that will actually show what the interiors of the building into which we are moving will actually look like. To say that the excitement is building is indeed an understatement!

Meanwhile, several other committees are hard at work, planning programs and events for the next several months at Har Sinai. The "Year of Shabbat" Committee is finalizing plans for the first of a series of innovative Friday night services which will encourage congregational participation. This service is scheduled for Friday, September 23, 2005. The Fund Raising Committee is arranging a terrific Fall event, namely a wine tasting dinner hosted by Spencer Christian, to take place on Saturday, November 12th at Tre Piani in Princeton. You will be receiving more information shortly about what should be a great evening. Sisterhood will be starting the year with a "How to Play Mah Jongg" session on September 15th, to be followed in October by a "Dinner and Bingo" evening. Steve Miller and the Men's Club are planning an event on September 22nd, a "Learn To Play Poker" evening which should be great fun (too bad it's only for men!).

I am also very excited by what I see happening with Har Sinai's Youth Groups. HSTY has already planned a full program with a lot of great events coming up which you'll be seeing in future mailings. This year, Har Sinai has a new Junior HSTY group, to bridge the gap between Shovavim and HSTY-what a great idea! You'll also be receiving information about Shovavim's future programs as well.

Our publicity effort is beginning to bear fruit: news about various aspects of Har Sinai life have appeared or will shortly be appearing in several area newspapers, including the Yardley News, Pennington Post, Hopewell Valley News, Trenton Times, NJ Jewish State and the New Jersey Jewish News. This is a work in progress, and we're aiming to be part of the calendar portion of some of these papers on a regular basis.

I hope to see you back at Har Sinai in September to take advantage of one or several of the great things that we have in store. And stay tuned for more news on our move and additional programming updates!

Adult Education...

SHABBAT SERVICES AT GREENWOOD HOUSE

Each Friday Morning in September at 10:30 am

Join Rabbi and/or Cantor every Friday at Greenwood House for a Shabbat Service with the residents. The brief service is meaningful to the residents, many of whom are still members of our Congregation. They enjoy even a brief visit with other members of Har Sinai.

LUNCH AND LEARN

Tuesdays at 12 noon

(Beginning September 13)

This year, the group and Rabbi Pollack will be studying one of the greatest and most controversial works of literature, the Biblical book, The Song of Songs. Known in Hebrew as Shir HaShirim, it is a biblical collection of erotic love poetry, a dialogue between two lovers. It was seen by the Rabbis, however, as a metaphor for the greatest love story of all, that between God and the people Israel. We will be using the text from the Union of Reform Judaism Press which includes both modern and ancient commentaries. There will be lively discussion as we plumb the depths of this masterpiece. Bring your own lunch; we provide the dessert.

HOME STUDY GROUP

(Beginning Wednesday, September 28, at 8:00 pm)

Home of Rita Allen

The Home Study Group, which meets in congregants' homes, USUALLY on the 2nd Wednesday of each month, has been a staple of Har Sinai for close to forty years and has proven to be one of the most enduring adult education experiences in Temple life. Please join us for fascinating discussions on current events with a Jewish twist. The topics range from politics to legal decisions that affect our daily lives. There is rarely a dull moment when we discuss everything from privacy issues to the separation of Church and State. We often review the latest news stories as we try to give many contemporary issues perspective and meaning. The September/October meeting will be held at the home of Rita Allen in Yardley. To RSVP, for directions, or more information, call Rita at 215-295-0115.

EXTREME TORAH STUDY

Saturdays from 9:15 to 10:15 am

(Beginning September 10)

There is no Torah Study group of this kind anywhere. Rabbi Pollack will be giving his utterly unique view of the Torah portion relying on just about all of the ancient and modern commentaries. These fascinating discussions get to the heart of the Torah portions and beyond. This is truly the essence of studying the Bible as adults because no topic or opinion is off limits. If you want to be exposed to a view of the Bible and Judaism that you can't get anywhere else, this class is the place to be.

SPECIAL "YEAR OF SHABBAT" SERVICES TO BEGIN SEPTEMBER 23rd

The Long Range Advisory Committee of our congregation has designated this year "The Year of Shabbat." Towards the goal of increasing the spirituality and meaning of Shabbat, a number of unique services will be presented to the congregation. Some of these services are entitled Kehilat Shabbat or services that encourage greater involvement from the worshipper. The first of these services will be held on Friday, September 23, at 8:00 PM. The theme of this first Kehilat service will be "Shabbat." As in all Kehilat services, a number of members of our Congregation will help lead the service with contemporary Jewish music mixed in with the traditional favorites. We hope the relaxed atmosphere of this style of worship will encourage the congregation's participation in the service.

Other services are also planned for the "Year of Shabbat" emphasizing educational and musical themes. We know that everyone will want to join us in this wonderful experience which will help to transform the spiritual landscape of our congregation.

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL REPORT

Magda Reyes, Director of Education

Late summer seems to be a time of preparation, change and uncertainty. As I am helping my daughter pack for her freshman year away at college, I can't help but reminisce about the past late summers of getting ready for a new class, new teachers and new friends. I remember hoping that she would be happy with her new surroundings, grow in meeting new challenges and yet retain all that we had taught her at home. Now that she is about to take even greater steps towards independence, I know that she holds a little bit of us in her heart.

A big part of what she carries with her is her Jewish identity. Her Judaism defines who she is, influences the decisions she will make now, and colors her outlook on the world around her. We know she absorbed the values and morals that we considered most important in religious school and reinforced at home. During her years in a Jewish preschool, through religious school to confirmation and continuing in her years as a Toran, she learned about ethics, tradition, history and culture that was a part of us and now will be a part of her. I know that her religious training, in combination with her academic schooling, will serve her well now that she is ready to go out on her own. I hope that her mother's chicken soup will bring her back!

As we prepare the religious school for the new school year, we try to keep in mind that the focus of the curriculum, in addition to the academics, is to instill in your children a sense of pride in their Jewish heritage, to teach about the world around them, to provide a link with the past and an anticipation of the future, and to impart knowledge of the traditions of our religion.

I am looking forward to sharing a full year of Jewish learning and growth with you. See you in September!

Library News

Rita Allen, Librarian (ritaallen@sbcglobal.net)

As we now begin to think more seriously about our relocation, I have to think about the library's holdings. Many books have been discarded for various reasons; these are being donated to institutions for their research collections. Four boxes were sent to Harvard, and we have received an appreciative letter from Elizabeth Vernon, of the Judaica Division of Harvard College Library. In the near future, books will also be going to San Diego State University and the University of Arizona at Tempe, Arizona.

It is my responsibility to work through these discarded books, just as, elsewhere, in our building, others will be examining and inventorying everything that we have acquired in over 70 years on Bellevue Avenue.
