nings for The Fund?

edges receipt of the following donations:

H. H. Joseph in memory of Sigmund Korach; Mrs. I. J. Kabb and Mrs. R.
Schaffner in memory of their mother.

One On Justice Cardozo

Justice Cardozo, like his associates on the bench, seldom dines out but confesses to enjoying an occasional evening with young people, to get their fresh outlook on life, as well as to hear, let us say, their spontaneity of expression.

His hostess recently was a young matron in her early twenties and the Supreme Court Justice was telling how he had seen the President come up Connecticut Avenue in his car, surrounded by a motorcycle escort.

In his genially philosophical way, Cardozo wondered whether any person, President though he be, had the right to command such right of way in a democratic country. And he added that the only time he had had a motorcycle cop was when he had gone with an ambulance.

"Oh! Mr. Justice," exclaimed this hostess, "were you an ambulance chaser?"

WOMAN UNDER HITLERISM

By Frau Mathilde Wurm

(Former Member of the Reichstag)

It is well known that German Fascism is greatly indebted for its victory to the German women. Many years before Hitler came into power the standard of living of the working class and the middle class was so low that millions of women who had never been breadwinners were forced into paid employment. A great many of the middle-class women felt degraded in the positions of secretaries, shop assistants, etc., and also many of the working-class women who were terribly overburdened by the three-fold duties as housewives, mothers and breadwinners longed for a chance of getting rid of the necessity of earning their bread.

This was the position by which Hitler profited. He promised to provide all men sufficient wages to guarantee a decent life for the whole family, the end of women's work, and moreover, he promised under his dictatorship every girl should get a husband. This prospect impressed millions of women so much that they used their right to vote for the benefit of the National Socialist Party. In various German districts where men and women voted separately the percentage of women voting in favor of the Nazis was much higher than that of the men.

Eighteen months after the seizure of power by the Nazis the women have clearly realized that none of their great hopes have been fulfilled, and that their position has greatly changed to their disadvantage. The legal, economic and political equality of the sexes which had been stipulated by the Constitution of 1918 has been entirely abolished.

Numerically, however, the elimination of women from industry brought about the most important change. When the Nazis came into power about 11,500,000 were employed, i. e. 36 per cent of all employable people. Today only 6,000,000 women are employed, and according to a statement of the Secretary to the Reich Board of Finance, this figure is to be lowered as quickly as possible to 3,000,000.

The struggle against employment of women in industry, which is alleged to be carried through for German family life, practically destroys it. The Minister of the Interior, Dr. Frick, pointed out on the 13th of May, 1934, that "whoever takes seriously his biological duties toward state and nation must be provided with special rights. Therefore it is impossible and unjust to take mothers of many children out of the working process." That is to say that women who are overburdened by a large family, whose health has been weakened by many pregnancies and many births, are admitted to the hardships of work in factories, whereas the younger and stronger women have to stay at home.

Thus, the present situation of women in Germany may be summarized by saying that all modern achievements, which the best of them fought during decades, have been completely wiped out, and that women have been thrown back to medieval conditions.

(From "The Economic Bulletin" of The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League to Champion Human Rights).

G. K. CHESTERTON SPEAKING

"A very large number of humble and harmless Jews, not usurers or even financiers, but fiddlers, actors, schoolmasters, chess-champions, mathematicians, astronomers, and such riff-raff, have been beggared and beaten and hounded out of Germany, on the ground that the Jewish culture had grown too powerful or Jewish ideas too prevalent; and that the Jewish spirit is an exclusive spirit and the Jewish God a jealous God. I am not discussing that as a point of politics. There is a Jewish problem! there is certainly a Jewish culture; and I am inclined to think that it really was too prevalent in Germany. For here we have the Hitlerites themselves, in plain words, saying they are a Chosen Race. Where could they have gotten that notion? Where could they even have gotten that phrase, except from the Jews?"

IN QUIETNESS AND IN CONFIDENCE

The typhoons of the China Seas, notorious for their fury and danger, have been found to be circular in character, and that, whereas the wind on their outskirts may reach a speed of a hundred miles an hour, at the center of the storm there is a space of complete calm. The skilled navigator, if he is unable to escape the storm, steers right into the heart of it and rests there. So, too, amid the commotion and confusion about us, may we not find a place of quiet, safe from the buffetings of the world's restlessness? It is such a haven that our faith offers us, not by fleeing from the world, not by trying to avoid the storm, once it is upon us, but by retaining our dignity and composure in the midst of surrounding turbulence. By following the guidance of our faith we may find in ourselves a refuge of calm in the heart of the storm, unperturbed by the confusion about us.

One looks with admiration at the gigantic prophetic figures, standing unmoved and often solitary amidst crisis and stress. Being strong in faith, naught could prevail against them. What they exemplified in superlative degree, ordinary men and women might follow according to their power. The greater the prevailing confusion, the more disturbing the events in the world about us, the truer is the conviction of the prophet: "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength."—From the West London Synagogue Magazine.

BRIEF BOOK REVIEWS "The World As I See It"

By Albert Einstein

In this compact volume an anonymous disciple of Einstein has collected his characteristic utterances. They are scientific, philosophical, altruistic, political and even controversial—a valuable symposium, as it were, of thought in a single mind that sees life and the environment of life as a whole.

The passages quoted in these pages fall into five sections. In the first, Einstein speaks as a scientist of relativity and research and whatever happened at the moment to be on his mind. Later we have his views on the world where he lives—on Judaism, peace and war, and—last but not least—Germany.

It is not a theory that is revealed in these pages. It is a person—and a compelling person. As a mathematician, Einstein may be a little difficult for some people to get on with. As a man, he is irresistible.

WHERE THE GHETTO ENDS

By Leon Dennen

The author presents a very gripping picture of the new Jew in the U. S. S. R. In contrast to the new chapter of hope and joy and self-assurance which the Soviet Government opened for its three million Jews, there is the contrast of hopelessness, misery and fear on the part of the U. S. S. R. to secure equality for all its nations and a firm foundation for every national minority. With great simplicity Dennen portrays the period when the Jews of U. S. S. R. are building their new life while still keeping fresh in their mind the sad past.

Catholic Priest Becomes a Jew

A sensation was caused in Warsaw last December, among Jews and non-Jews, when a Catholic priest was converted to Judaism.

The priest, whose name is Joseph Sumina, adopted the Jewish name of Abram ben Abram, which is usually given to converts to Judaism. He is twenty-nine years old and has been residing in Lubin, Poland.

MEN'S CLUB FORGES TO SOCIAL FRONT!

Threatens Monopoly on Social Activities

All latest press dispatches indicate that the Euclid Avenue Temple Men's Club will have a month of tremendous activity during February. It is difficult for veteran members to recall a month where four major events follow each other in rapid succession.

Rumors fly thick and fast that the Men's Club, by its variegated forms of social activity, is attempting to promote a "corner" on its members leisure time. Oscar Steiner stands a very good chance of winning the gold loving cup for outstanding performance as Men's Club President (when and if such a prize is awarded).

The four major events in February? Here they are:

Father-Son Banquet February 10th
Discussion Group - February 12th
Bowling Night - February 14th
Contract Bridge - February 26th

BRILLIANT ASSEMBLAGE ATTENDS CONTRACT BRIDGE NIGHT

Many Brave Zero Weather To See National Bridge Authorities In Action

Under the soft amber lights of medieval Spanish surroundings at the Alcazar Hotel, in vivid contrast to a blizzard night, an epoch-making event unfolded itself on the evening of January 23rd.

Clustered about 12 tables the flower of the Men's Club membership heard Elmer Babin and Sidney Pink reveal the mysteries of duplicate contract bridge. So wrapped were the members in the intricacies of the game that it was 12:30

A. M. before the playing ended. Then palate-tempting sandwiches and coffee were served.

Several prizes were awarded the winners.

The Social Activities Committee, consisting of David R. Bamberger, chairman, Elmer Babin, Dr. L. B. Podis and Herman Bercu deserves great credit for the efficient handling of this affair.
