NOTICE

Because of illness, Dr. Louis L.
Mann, Rabbi of Chicago Sinai Congregation, will be unable to occupy the pulpit at the Friday Evening Service this week. In behalf of the Euclid Avenue Temple, we express our regrets that we must miss the opportunity to hear this great Jewish religionist and national leader.

We pray that God may grant Dr.
Mann a speedy recovery.

marriage of their marriage of their marriage of their daughter, Shirley to Paul I. Flacks, February 6.

WORDS

What should I have said, when my boy went overseas
With that grin on his face and that glint on his gun?
What were the words to use in midst of hours like these?
What should I have found to say to my stalwart son?

What words should I have used to make him see more clearly
All that's in my mind, and all that I would have alone—
How my love for him grew daily, monthly, yearly?
For there's so much one would say to a soldier son.

The train began to move, our hands
touched in parting—
He leaned from the window, while I was forced to run—
His eyes looked in mine as mine with tears were smarting:
And all I could say was, "Good luck!
God bless you, son!"

A V-MAIL LETTER ABOUT RABBI BRICKNER

(The following V-mail letter- forwarded to us by Mr. Alfred A. Benesch, was written by Lt. (j. g.) Mark Leva, of the U. S. Navy.)

January 22, 1944.

Dear Mr. Benesch:

I have just had the pleasure and privilege of showing your friend, Rabbi Brickner, over the ship. I was delighted to have the opportunity of meeting him, and when he expressed a desire to see an LST (landing ship for tanks), I was happy to be his guide. I met him entirely by accident, and when he told me that he was from Cleveland, I of course asked him to remember me to you upon his return home.

. . . I attended services, too, at which Rabbi Brickner spoke. He gave a masterful address before a large and attentive audience. I heard many people remark that Rabbi Brickner's work made more sense than anything they had heard since coming overseas. I was very much impressed, and your city is indeed fortunate to have a rabbi of Dr. Brickner's calibre.

Next week I shall write you at greater length—but I wanted to write to you about Dr. Brickner, without delay.

Meditations for an American Jew

As a human being, let me live that I may give to mankind the best that is in me, and make the best that others give a part of myself.

As an American, let me hold my heritage at its true worth, and make myself a valiant battler against the "isms" that people poisoned by Fascism and Nazism are trying to foist upon us and our country.

As a Jew let me be conscious of the honor of my religion, and so live that I will do nothing to besmirch it.

As a member of a congregation, let me be quick to discharge my responsibilities to it, even if sometimes this may involve sacrifices.

As one who regards the House of Worship as my spiritual center, let me devote to it that time necessary for congregational worship and communion with my Maker.

As a human parent, let me be sure that I show my child how best to attain the highest human ends, and to desist from unjust and inhuman practices.

As an American parent, let me be quick to impress upon my child, the greatness of our American heritage and its way of life, and the importance of being loyal to them.

As a Jewish parent, let me not be negligent in helping my child to secure a religious training in the history, the essentials and the aspirations of my religion.

As a member of a group persecuted in other lands, let me impress upon my child through my own example, the necessity of aiding and assisting all men whether of my faith or not, who are suffering because of their ideals, their religion or their racial origins.
