Temple Tomorrow

Building Our Future Today

“TOMORROW” GETS ONE DAY CLOSER!

As promised this space is reserved, from time to time for news on our Temple Tomorrow project. Here's the latest bulletin:

We made our first real “dig” on December 3rd as bulldozers and shovels prepared the ground for the paving of a temporary parking lot. Sometime in March, we will need to temporarily close the main entrance to the building. This new lot will make it easier for congregants to enter the building at the new temporary entrance. We're not ready to close the front door yet, but we needed to build this lot now while weather permits. We will keep you updated regularly on changes to traffic patterns, both walking and driving.

As you can see, Jeanne Tobin and Rabbi Block “helped” the crew do the heavy lifting!

FROM THE RABBI'S STUDY

Among the blessings of serving as President of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, is traveling to Israel for meetings and conferences. I cherish every opportunity to visit the Jewish State, our spiritual home away from home. Even in perilous times, it is thrilling to experience its exuberance and vitality, its beauty and historic resonance, the riches of its culture, its delectable food and wines. Susie and I became Israeli citizens when I assumed the presidency of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, the position I held before coming to The Temple. Even though we no longer live there, our Israeli citizenship is very meaningful. Whenever I use the Israeli passport that I am required to show when I enter and leave that country, or need to show my Israeli identity card, even when we have to sit for more than an hour in a Jerusalem bank to renew the Israeli credit cards for which we have no practical need, I feel a renewed connection with its past and present, its fate and future. For two millennia, Jews hoped and prayed that Jewish sovereignty would be restored in our people's ancient homeland and that they would be privileged to see this come about and to stand upon its sacred soil. But it is we, no worthier than they, who have realized that blessing.

I cannot remember how many times I have been in Israel. Each time, it reveals something new about itself. Susie and I journeyed there in November for meetings of the Board of Governors of HUC-JIR. As always, it was a treat to set foot on what Jewish tradition calls "Eretz HaKodesh," the land of the Holy One. It was beautiful, sunny and warm in Jerusalem during our visit. The lovely weather, however, contrasted starkly with two terrorist murders. One victim was Almog Shimoni, 20, a young soldier stabbed to death in Tel Aviv. The second was Dalia Lemkus, 26, also stabbed, at a bus stop in the Etzion bloc, south of Jerusalem. Meanwhile, Iranian leader Khomeini once again called for Israel's annihilation. Tension ran high over confrontations at the Temple Mount. And yet, despite everything, Israel remained and remains a vibrant, complicated, hope-filled place.

We met with Israel's new president, Reuven Rivlin, a man of contradictions. His outreach to Israel's Arab citizens has been warm and courageous. In the weeks since our return, he has spoken out forcefully against the "Jewish nationhood bill" being considered by the Knesset. He spoke eloquently of the danger of elevating the Jewish character of Israel over its democratic character, a fundamental contradiction of the equal status of those two principles in Israel's Declaration of Independence. On the other hand, we saw no evidence that he has reconsidered some very negative comments about non-Orthodox movements of Judaism that he made before he became President. He is warm and engaging. We can only hope that he will grow in office, now that he represents, in important respects, the entire Jewish people. We also met with Stav Shaffir, an incredibly impressive woman, the Knesset's youngest member at 29 years of age, representing the Labor party. She is reason enough to be optimistic about Israel's future.

As those who have traveled to Israel can attest, long days of lectures and touring can be incredibly tiring and intense. One day, we heard presentations by Professor Shlomo Avineri, Israel's most distinguished political scientist, Danny Seidman, a passionate, politically far left expert on Jerusalem status issues, Ruchie Avital, spokesperson for Ofra, a West Bank settlement east of Ramallah, and Col. Danny Tirza, the chief designer and project director of the 451 mile long security barrier, 95% of it a high tech fence, that Israel was forced to build in response to a tidal wave of suicide bombings. It was a day of strong and often contradictory opinions and passions, a day that demonstrated the complexity and danger of Israel's situation in that volatile region, the hardness of its democracy, the daunting challenges that stand in the way of a peace agreement with the Palestinians, and the unquenchable aspiration for a brighter future, despite everything. For me, the day's most inspiring and moving moment came with the final remarks of Col. Tirza, who pointed out that at the top of sections of the barrier where it was necessary to build a wall, rather than a fence, each one was built with a hole. Why? To make it as easy as possible to pull the wall down when peace comes, a day that he, and we, pray will come speedily and soon.

On another amazing day in Jerusalem we heard from two young reservists called up for service in Gaza. They grew up in Israeli Reform congregations and credit the ethical values they learned in our Movement for being instrumental in shaping them as people, Israelis, Jews, and soldiers. We learned about three cutting edge organizations: Reshut HaRabbim, a coalition of Jewish renaissance organizations in Jerusalem, including Hebrew Union College, Yerushalem, a grassroots coalition to enhance the pluralism of Jerusalem, and Ginot Ha-Ir, a community-based NGO of 9 neighborhoods that surround the wonderfully renovated old train station and its environs. Together, these and other partner organizations are creating amazing, innovative options for Jewish expression and experiences in the city, focused primarily on the non-Orthodox, but supported by many Modern Orthodox who realize that Jerusalem could not survive if it became an Orthodox ghetto. Afterwards, we celebrated the ordination of four new Israeli Reform rabbis, bringing the total number of rabbis ordained by HUC in Israel to 90. These talented young leaders are helping to transform the Jewish landscape in Israel.

The last few weeks have been terribly painful for Israelis and all who care about the Jewish State. The heartless and cowardly murder of four rabbis and a Druze policeman by Arab terrorists, miles within the Green Line, during synagogue prayers, was an atrocity of indescribable proportions. It offered compelling proof, if proof be needed, of the challenges and threats that Israel and Israelis face every day. Whatever our political views, we stand in solidarity with them and acknowledge, with humility and gratitude, the sacrifices they make on behalf of us all.

EXCITING THINGS ARE HAPPENING AT GANON GIL!

We have always taken great pride in our sense of family among students, staff and families; our warm nurturing environment, individualized attention to children and family; and pride in being part of the larger Temple community.

We are thrilled to announce that Ganon Gil has been awarded the prestigious 5-star rating in the Ohio Step-up to Quality! Step Up to Quality is an accreditation designed to improve the quality of early child care and education programs in Ohio.

When programs takes steps to increase quality, children display more confidence, a greater curiosity about the world around them and are more eager to learn. These are important skills for success in school and in life.

A few of the key standards that represent a 5-Star program are:

- The administrator and teachers have higher education qualifications.
- The administrator and teachers complete more than 20 hours of specialized training every two years to better support children's development and learning.
- Teachers develop intentional and purposeful activities that support each child's growth.
- The program completes ongoing assessments with our children to help track of their growth over time.
- The program work with families and neighborhood organizations to provide more opportunities for children.

We will begin registration for the 2015-2016 Summer Camp and School Year on Monday, January 5, 2015. If you are interested in visiting, please call me to schedule a tour, (216) 464-0536.

We also have a number of exciting programs for the entire congregation that we are co-sponsoring with Temple Family Connections – Mom's Nights Out and Parenting in the Trenches Programs.

DR. ZOLA WILL DELIVER A PRESIDENT'S DAY MESSAGE AND SPEAK ON 'He Was Like One of Us': Abraham Lincoln and American Jewry

6:00 p.m. - Service • 7:00 p.m. - Shabbat Dinner • 8:00 p.m. - Program

Dr. Zola

Although countless volumes have been published on the life of Abraham Lincoln, relatively few people are aware of the remarkable history that links American Jewry and the sixteenth president. Dr. Gary P. Zola of Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati – the only American Jewish historian to have served on the Academic Advisory Council of the congressionally recognized Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Commission in Washington, D.C. – recently completed a volume on Lincoln titled We Called Him Rabbi Abraham: Lincoln and American Jewry. Dr. Zola will reconstruct Lincoln's relationship with American Jewry during the course of his lifetime and, also, he will explain why generations of American Jews believed him to be an "almost chosen person." Zola's analysis of Lincoln's historical image seeks to clarify why generations of American Jews have preferred to think of America's "Father Abraham" as American Judaism's "Rabbi Abraham."

Social Justice is sponsoring a Virtual Shower

We are looking for new or gently used household items for our friends at Family Promise.

NOTE: Family Promise is now providing temporary housing at a central location. Therefore, the program no longer needs Churches and Synagogues to host participating families. Although we are not hosting families this year – we will still support Family Promise through our annual Virtual Shower! Please help out if you can!

When FP families transition to their new home, they rely on the generosity of others. Please help by donating one (or more) household items. We will gladly accept kitchen items & gadgets, paper goods, cleaning supplies, blankets, towels, bedding, small furniture, lamps, TV's and more.

Donations may be dropped off at The Temple now through January 14th

If your downsizing a home, need help schlepping, or have questions please contact Faith Schaffer at FS321@aol.com

Let's do this together - Support Social Justice at The Temple!

DO A KNIT-ZVAH THIS YEAR!

WHAT COULD BE BETTER ON A CHILLY WINTER DAY THAN BROWSING THROUGH JEWISH ART BOOKS IN THE COMFY CHAIRS OF THE HARTZMARK LIBRARY?

Last month, our excellent Jewish art book library collection expanded even more to include Jewish art books from the Aaron Garber Library collection. As many of you know, the Aaron Garber Library that had been located next door at the Agnon Building closed its doors in August of 2014. The library was founded in 1924 as the library for the Bureau of Jewish Education and had over 40,000 volumes and other library related materials. After the closing, synagogues and day school libraries were invited to select books for their institutions.

So now if you want to snuggle up with books about Israeli art, Jewish carpets, Marc Chagall, Ketubah, Illuminated Jewish Manuscripts, Jewish Art in America, Art as Politics in the Third Reich, or Art from the Collection of the Israel Museum, you can! If you are interested in books about Jewish artists from around the world, the selection now includes, Eva Hesse, Judy Chicago, Ben Shan, Rafael Soyfer, Charlotte Salomon, Moshe Kopferman and Daniel Libeskind, to name a few.

These books, rare art catalogues, and scholarly art journals, will serve as excellent resources for our continuing research about Jewish ritual objects in our museum collection and about the Jewish artists who have created pieces of fine art in our collection.

Librarian Andi Davidson and I will be organizing over 400 Jewish art books, catalogues, and journals that we received from the Aaron Garber Library. These books will be added to the library's expanding collection of Jewish art books and will make our library one of the most comprehensive Jewish art book collections in this area both for pleasure reading and for scholarship.
