Temple President's Rosh Hashana Address

ormally this would be the part of the service where I would make announcements about upcoming events. However, it is more important that we use this time to take a close look at ourselves as a congregation and make our commitments for the new year. We begin a new year today and a new year brings with it new hope and challenges. The challenges we face this coming year are many and difficult but there is also reason for hope.

In my July letter to you I outlined the critical needs of Temple Israel and informed you of temporary measures the Board of Trustees had adopted to meet the economic problems which we, as a congregation, all face.

In that letter I regretfully stated that, based upon current economic conditions, we would no longer be able to financially afford to maintain an assistant Rabbi and Cantor on our professional staff. In that letter I also asked for your help stating "More than ever we need the involvement and support of each and every congregant."

I believe that we Jews have historically responded with great strength whenever a major focus of Jewish life, such as a synagogue, is threatened. You as a congregation have begun to respond. Community leaders have come forward and volunteered to help. Many congregants have voluntarily offered financial help, some of whom have never offered before.. If that commitment can spread throughout the congregation, I am confident that this coming year can be one of the most successful in the history of our congregation.

There are several areas where I believe significant progress can be made during this new year with your increased involvement and support.

Several months ago the Dues Revision Committee was formed. The purpose was to develop an equitable structure to encourage every congregant to support Temple Israel to the best of his or her ability. The Dues Revision Committee has had numerous meetings including three open meetings. The open meetings are designed to give congregants an opportunity to express their views on a new dues structure. The Dues Revision Committee has already made changes to its preliminary proposals based upon input received from concerned congregants. The next open meeting is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. on Sunday, September 15 in the library. I encourage any congregant who wishes to provide input to the Committee to attend this important meeting. A final proposal will be presented to the Board of Trustees for its consideration at the October Board meeting with implementation hopefully planned for January 1, 1992.

As your President I pledge that, with your acceptance and financial support of our new revised dues structure, Temple Israel will be able to offer you a complete array of Temple services administered by a complete professional staff consisting of a Rabbi, Assistant Rabbi, Cantor, Administrator and Professional Educator. However, time is of the essence and the realization of these goals depends upon the efforts and support of each and every congregant.

It will take more than a financial commitment for us to achieve all of our goals. We need your personal involvement as well. Many of you have expressed the concern that your opinions are not being heard or seriously considered. Several initiatives have been undertaken to respond to these concerns.

The Dues Revision Committee has carefully solicited your views throughout its deliberations. A Long Range Planning Committee has been created which will be welcoming your input to help establish goals for our future. A new membership involvement committee will be formed to develop ways for more congregants to become personally involved in Temple activities. Finally, a committee has been created which will propose changes in the organization and operation of the Board of Trustees so that we can operate more efficiently and be more open to expressed concerns of congregants.

Although we are a congregation of diverse backgrounds and opinions, we can all agree that Temple Israel, which was founded nearly 150 years ago, must continue to thrive and prosper. I have called upon many of you for your help and expertise and I am happy to report that real progress is being made. I believe that this past year has made us all more aware of the importance of Temple Israel to our lives. A New Year is a time for resolutions. Let us all pledge on this Rosh Hashana to play a greater role in the effort to become positively involved, both financially and spiritually, in Temple Israel's future. We begin a new year today. May it be a good, healthy and happy year for all of us. On behalf of the clergy, the Board of Trustees and their families, I wish you all a L'Shana Tovah.

SPECIAL REPORT

Show Your Support

During this past year, we have been blessed by the arrival in Israel of over 250,000 Soviet and Ethiopian Jews. This massive exodus represents the fulfillment of our historic dream, that of the "Ingathering of the Exiles."

At the same time, however, this momentous aliyah brings with it enormous economic challenges to Israel. In the very near future, the Israeli government will formally request from the United States a $10 billion absorption Loan Guarantee package, $2 billion a year over the next five years. The United States will be asked to simply "co-sign" a loan package which will be repaid exclusively by the Israeli government. It is extremely important that you make your voice heard in support of the absorption Loan Guarantees.

Write or call your representative and senators in Congress. Explain why these loan guarantees are needed and how this will enable Jews fleeing from the Soviet Union and Ethiopia to live in freedom in their homeland. Include in your message:

- Support for a strong and secure Israel is part and parcel of American policy in the Middle East.

 No other country in the region embraces the democratic values Americans hold dear. In addition, Israel has been the most sustained and dependable ally of the United States in the Middle East.
- The current massive emigration of Soviet Jews is truly one of the United States Government's greatest foreign policy successes. American can now complete this great human rights success by assisting with Soviet-Jewish resettlement in Israel.
- The United States government, in helping Israel invest in itself, is contributing to the economic development of the region. This process is integral to creating long-term peace and stability in the area.

Tsedaka in action for 5752

Temple Israel is putting Tsdaka in action for the new year. Jewish Family Services approached Temple Israel earlier in the year and asked the congregation to sponsor three Russian families immigrating to Columbus. Without hesitation, we accepted this exciting opportunity. The first one of these families, the Uchitelevas, arrived on Wednesday, August 28th.

The Russian Welcoming Committee immediately took charge to assure that all the family's needs were met. Thanks to the efforts of Alan Katz, Henry Saeman, Barbara Seeder, Tussy Shnider, Shelly Corn and other members of the congregation, the Uchitelevas now have an apartment stocked with all the necessities to start their new life in Columbus, Ohio. We would like to acknowledge the special help of William and Robert Glick of Glick's Furniture. who donated furniture to the family.

The Uchitelevas attended Shabbat services on Friday, August 28th. The family, consisting of grandparents, parents and their 7-year old son, was introduced and recognized from the bema and received an unexpected ovation from the congregants. Communication was difficult because they speak only Russian, but excitement and anticipation clearly showed on their faces. Call the office if you wish to be part of the support group helping this family.

Our responsibility extends to the two other Russian families who will arrive at some future date, depending upon when they are allowed to leave the Soviet Union. We need people to donate time, funds and household items to meet their basic needs. Please bring all donations of linens, towels, kitchen utensils, cookware and other household goods, to the Temple. A new fund has been established to provide food, clothing and other necessities upon the families' arrivals. Send your contributions to the Temple office marked for the "Resettlement Fund."

Given current world events, this is an exciting and challenging mitzvah for Temple Israel.

From the rabbi

This week is Shabbat Baraysheet and so we roll the Torah back to the time of the creation of the world. There we find the human attempt to describe the divine event. We discover that God created a single human being. Why? The rabbis tell us "in order to teach that whoever destroys a single life is as guilty as though they destroy an entire world; and whoever saves one life, is merited as if they save an entire world."

We are reminded that even a single action can have a tremendous effect upon another person and in turn, possibly upon the world at large. We must never underestimate the power of a supportive word or a responsive smile. One look of encouragement or a sensitive ear can turn someone around. A single warm embrace can cure most human affliction. One act of kindness can help someone have faith in people once again.

Baraysheet, from the beginning we were created in "God's image" with the ability to change our world, our synagogue, others and ourselves. Let us always take advantage of this great opportunity.

Rabbi Steven W. Engel

Cohn Receives 1991 Humanitarian Award

Temple Israel's Humanitarian Award for 1991 will be given October 11 to Gerald N. Cohn, Executive Vice President of Wexner Heritage Village.

Mr. Cohn will be presented with this high honor at Temple Israel's annual Humanitarian Sabbath at 8 p.m. Friday, October 11. The congregation is invited to the award ceremonies during Sabbath and to the Oneg following services.

Mr. Cohn has been one of the leading professionals in care for the elderly. He most recently spearheaded the further development of the multimillion dollar facility for the elderly on the Wexner Heritage Village campus. Mr. Cohn has taken Heritage House from a relatively small facility in the 1960's to today's nationally recognized, state-of-theart facility, providing a widecontinuum of care.

His contributions to the Jewish community have been innumerable. He serves, or has served on many Jewish and non-Jewish organizations in the homes for the elderly field, including the Franklin County Council on Aging, the Governor's Task Force on Nursing Homes, Columbus Area Community Mental Health Center, Alzheimers Disease Association, Columbus Chapter and the Ohio State University Department of Geriatrics and Gerontology.

Mr. Cohn has also served as president of the National Association of Jewish Homes for the Aged and as vice president of the American Association of Homes for the Aging.

Temple Israel's Honors Committee is pleased to make this special award to Mr. Cohn. Members of the Honors Committee include Geoffrey Stern, chairman, Les Somogyi, David Madison and Tudy Krupnick.

Here To Help

Barry K. and his family lived through a common situation in today's modern society, depression. Ordinarily, Barry was a playful, energetic, 48-year-old man. His wife and daughter often heard him singing in the shower, and he usually gave his wife an affectionate, even teasing kiss in the morning. But for some time, Barry has been having trouble rousing himself from sleep. Awaking each morning in a lethargic state, he would go about his early morning routine in a dull and listless manner.

A second cup of coffee on the way to work did little to clear the cobwebs in his brain. And listening to his favorite jazz tapes in the car more often than not annoyed him.

A successful tax attorney, Barry's clients included many Jewish businessmen and women and several good-sized corporations. But Barry was worried that the recession was eroding his income and business was falling off.

He knew he should be "out there" seeing his clients, but his energy level just wasn't there. Instead of making phone calls and setting up appointments, Barry would daydream at his desk, lost in vague, digressive thought. At times Barry even questioned why he was doing the work he did.

The K's earned a good living and the family was thought of as "comfortably well off."

Although married a year after they graduated from OSU, Barry's wife Janice didn't start working part-time for an advertising company until seven years ago. As their children grew and her talents were recognized by the company, Janice assumed more responsibilities with the firm and started working full-time.

Yet expenses were eating up their income at an alarming rate. Tuition for Steve, their college-senior son, was expensive and he was planning on law school next year. A second mortgage taken out for a beautiful addition on their home and money sent each month to Barry's parents were taking their toll. Shari's college expenses were just around the corner, as their daughter was graduating from high school this year.

Barry kept telling himself not to worry. He was capable. He'd snap out of it. He'd weathered storms before. Janice watched Barry's sullen demeanor and was concerned for his well being. She tried to talk to Barry, but he hold her not to worry - things were under control.

But things weren't until control. Barry's mood worsened. He had no appetite and slept poorly. Saturday nights, when they usually went out with other couples, Barry found excuses to stay home. He just wanted to watch ESPN alone, in silence. And when that became irritating, he'd go for late night walks. More and more, Barry was ill at ease and couldn't regain his equilibrium.

One morning it came to a head. While driving Barry started to tremble so, he pulled the car to the side of the road. As the trembling increased, his hands gripped the steering wheel so tightly that his knuckles turned white. Barry started to cry uncontrollably for what seemed a long time, until he was able to calm himself. He called Janice from the car phone and she met him. They finally talked. At her urging, Barry called their rabbi, who came over and talked with them. Recognizing Barry's distress, the rabbi urged him to call Jewish Family Services. Barry called immediately and began to find his way back.

Through individual and family sessions, Barry was becoming his old self again. The JFS therapist helped Barry develop new life strategies based on a different view of himself, his work and his marriage. Janice knew Barry was happier and things were coming around when Saturday night they went dancing.

Barry's symptoms are typical of a major depressive episode which can rapidly overwhelm a person. Or the process can be gradual.

Depression can affect anyone regardless of age, sex, education or income. It frequently has a biochemical basis, but can be brought on by the death of a loved one or by a stage of life crisis. By its very nature, depression is hard to resolve because it cripples the coping skills needed to fight it. One thing is certain, without professional help, depression can be hard to overcome.

If the situation and symptoms seem all-too-familiar, there's no need to suffer alone.

Jewish Family Services is here to help. Their highly trained clinicians treat depression and understand how it can affect you and your family. They care about your well being. Be assured their skills and talents, provided with absolute confidentiality and anonymity, will help you find answers to life's all-too-common problems.
