Higher Bond enrollment brings impact on Israel's economy

An important impact on Israel's economy will be made this year by increased enrollment in honor societies of Israel Bond investors, according to Sy Syms, newly named president of Bonds' Ambassador's Society of Trustees in the New York metropolitan area.

The society, which was founded in April, 1976 under the auspices of Simcha Dinitz, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, comprises individuals who invest a minimum of $10,000 in Israel Bonds during a given year.

Other honor societies of Israel Bond purchasers, which have been major sources in providing investment capital for Israel's economic development are the Prime Minister's Club (minimum annual purchase of $25,000) and the Guardians of Israel (minimum annual purchase of $1,000). This year, in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the reunification of Jerusalem, the latter group will be known as Shomrei Yerushalayim, Guardians of Jerusalem.

Mr. Syms, president of Syms Clothing Inc. and one of the leading clothing manufacturers and retailers in the Greater New York area, lauded the members of the Ambassador's Society of Trustees "for their invaluable assistance in helping the Israel Bond Organization achieve a record total of $311 million in worldwide sales in 1976 and $50 million throughout metropolitan New York.

"This level of bond purchaser realizes the grave economic problems confronting Israel in light of the necessity for increased defense spending until a peace settlement is achieved," he said. "With defense expenditures reaching $4.3 billion last year alone, the situation places a mounting drain on Israel's resources and threatens to undermine its economic stability."

Mr. Syms, who himself is a member of the Prime Minister's Club, said the Ambassador's Society campaign "will reach into congregations in New York, Long Island and Westchester and, in particular, into industries and professions throughout the area.

Sy Syms

"Our job," he said, "is to sensitize those persons in a position to purchase $10,000 or more in Israel bonds as to Israel's urgent need for investment capital to develop industry, commerce, housing, agriculture and energy supplies. A dramatic boost in such investment not only enhances Israel's economic picture but also gives it greater viability in its efforts to negotiate a permanent peace settlement in the Middle East."

Members of the Ambassador's Society of Trustees are presented a special scroll bearing Ambassador Dinitz's signature that acknowledges their "understanding and response to Israel's extraordinary economic needs."

'We Need the Cash,' Begin Says at Bonds Lunch

By PAUL L. MONTGOMERY

Behind the speaker's stand where Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel sat yesterday, there were rows of long luncheon tables with white linen. At each seat in the tiers in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel was a contributor who had pledged $100,000 or more to the State of Israel Bonds campaign.

Sam Rothberg, the general chairman of the drive, announced new donors as the Prime Minister listened attentively. "A check for $250,000 from the Bronfman family," Mr. Rothberg intoned to lingering applause from the gathering of 1,500. "Paul Shapiro of Cleveland, $100,000. Sy Syms, $100,000."

At the end of the proceedings, Mr. Rothberg said that more than $27 million had been raised for development projects in Israel. "This is the biggest single event in cash in the history of the bond organization," he said. "Some more money that's in the mail we'll know about Monday."

Mr. Begin, who spoke at the United Nations and met with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. earlier in the day, arose to give his address. The 67-year-old Prime Minister repeated the speech he had been giving to Jewish groups since he arrived Tuesday night, talking of Israel's determination to remain in Lebanon until it feels secure from the "neo-Nazi" Palestine Liberation Organization.

'The Scourge of Terrorism'

"The scourge of terrorism must be stamped out," he said. "We are not going to let those scoundrels come back and threaten the lives of our children. When peace comes, we shall say shalom to Lebanon, shalom to Israel. But not before, not before." Shalom means peace in Hebrew, and can be used as both hello and goodbye.

Mr. Begin invited the participants to go and see Israel, which he said was beginning to live with smiles and without threats from Lebanon. "We need the cash," he said as the audience laughed. "Anyone will spend a wonderful vacation, you and your children. And no more rockets will fall on you."

Israeli supporters shouting to the demonstrators who were marching to the United Nations after leaving the protest at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The biggest applause for the Prime Minister's speech came when he talked of his determination to resist "the pressure of America" to withdraw the Israeli Army from Lebanon before nonaggression was assured.

He said that in his visit he had found American Jews and "our Christian friends" united in support. "Never in the past was the great Jewish community of the United States so united around Israel, standing together," he said.

Mr. Begin mentioned the cost of the war and said that Saudi Arabia, which he described as a financial supporter of the P.L.O., had earned $122 billion in oil revenue last year. The $27 million raised at the luncheon, he said, was small in comparison.

Mr. Rothberg, sitting beside him, whispered, "Thirty-five million." "Thirty-five millions," said Mr. Begin. "Besser." That is a Yiddish word for better.

While Mr. Begin spoke at the United Nations in the morning, several thousand people rallied nearby at Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza in support of the Israeli stand. The rally was sponsored by the Conference of Presidents of American Jewish Organizations, which Mr. Begin addressed Thursday.

Later in the day, Mr. Begin presented an award on behalf of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith to Mayor Koch. Mr. Begin described the Mayor as a man "not afraid of any man or any thing, and, above all, a proud Jew, he does not feel it necessary to apologize that his mother and father were Jews."

P.L.O. Supporters Rally

During the Prime Minister's appearances, there were rallies of a thousand or more sponsored by the Palestine Congress of North America. The participants, waving placards in support of the P.L.O., set up Bedouin tents of white and green silk across from the Waldorf-Astoria and chanted slogans like "P.L.O. won't go away, P.L.O. is here to stay."

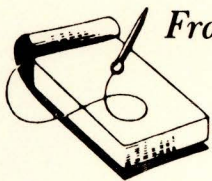

Some of the participants wore head-dresses similar to the ones used by P.L.O. guerrillas. Jawad George, a spokesman for the group, said most of the demonstrators were from New York but chartered buses brought some from Boston, Washington and Philadelphia.

Across the street from the shouting, waving demonstrators, a man with the lapel badge of the Israeli security service accompanying Mr. Begin watched with folded arms, saying nothing.

"What do you think of this?" he was asked.

"What I am saying," he replied.

BETWEEN THE LINES

ONE OF THEIR OWN: An impressive list of textile and tailored clothing executives turned out Thursday to honor fabric importer HERBERT DREXLER of Drexler Associates. In the convivial confines of the '21' Club, Drexler was the recipient of the Tower of David Award for his activities on behalf of the Israel Bond campaign. Hosting the event were the B'nai B'rith Chaplain Alexander D. Goode-Ben Goldman Lodge and the Menswear Division of the State of Israel Bonds. Also present was retailer SY SIMS, in formal attire and on his way to another event.

ALL THOSE BEADS: Since 1975, women all over America (including the ALEXIS CARRINGTON we all know and love) have known that FABRICE designs the best evening wear. His beaded evening dresses and separate pieces are seen at all the best formal events. Well, fasten your seat belts, because Fabrice has decided to launch a small yet startling men's wear collection of about 15 pieces. As he said in an interview recently in his Fifth Ave. showroom, "I just couldn't find a thing to wear for evening that wasn't a tuxedo... You don't always need to wear a tux for a dressy evening." With that in mind, Fabrice decided to create shirts with great necklines that are dressed up enough for formal dinners. He's also producing some "not quite jackets, but gilets... Now don't get me wrong. We're not talking about beaded dresses for men here—just wonderful masculine separates." The collection won't be ready before his women's show (April 29th), but excitement is already building in the marketplace. At least two NYC specialty stores (which will remain nameless, of course) are reportedly waiting with bated breath to see the collection. So are we.

FROM MAGIC

VIDEO PREMIER: Zeppelin chose the Variety Arts Theatre downtown as a location for the premiere showing of its first fashion video. Several hundred of Zeppelin's closest industry friends were handed glasses of champagne as they entered the glorious and beautifully designed theatre. From there, the guests took an old-fashioned, hand-operated elevator to the fourth floor, where they were greeted by tuxedo-clad Zeppelin management, including HARVEY TURELL and JIM STARK. It was all a prelude to a fashion show and a presentation of the four-minute video, which is set to rock 'n' roll music.

The video is running in a few hundred dance clubs across the country, according to Stark, and the company trying to persuade retailers to use it, along with other "commercialized" videos, in their stores.

The video is a lot of fun, especially if you're a car buff—it features a black 1940 Hudson and a new cherry red Porsche. And it was a fashionable way to kick off the MAGIC festivities in Los Angeles, even though BTL had to exit before the end of the show.

NEWS MAKES HEADLINES: International News, the Seattle-based young men's and juniors' sportswear manufacturer, made the kind of headlines last week that nobody likes. On Wednesday at about 10:45 p.m., MIKE ALESKO, ANN WENZEL, LARRY CHRISTMAN and KEVIN LAHAIE were robbed at gunpoint across the street from the California Mart.

Their rented van was stolen, and according to Christman and Wenzel, the robbers made off with cash, checks and credit cards totaling over $35,000. Also inside the van was the company appointment book, a bible to these people because it contained over 350 appointments for MAGIC and NAMSBS shows through the end of March.

Alesko told BTL he would deeply appreciate it if retailers with appointments would come forward at MAGIC and give him their scheduled times so that a new appointment book can be put together.

The stolen van also contained passports, licensing agreements and briefcases—"our whole lives" said LaHaie. Fortunately, all sample lines were safely inside the company's mart showroom. None of the International News crew was hurt; they were just badly shaken up.

Court Showdown Looming Over Ownership of Guess

LOS ANGELES — A showdown looms Feb. 20 in the Nakash-Marciano legal battle over ownership of Guess, Inc. The Nakashes will seek a preliminary injunction to free $1.5 million in dividends that the Guess board impounded in November. A summary judgment motion filed by the Nakashes to settle many of the Marcianos' claims will be heard by Judge Norman Epstein Feb. 20 in State Superior Court.

On Nov. 25, the Guess board approved a resolution impounding dividends due to the Nakashes, and $1.5 million is being held by the court. The Guess board will meet again in mid-January when more dividends to the Nakashes would be considered.

The Marcianos are continuing to collect their dividends, and received $1.5 million in November. Guess's court-appointed provisional director, Richard Schauer, voted to impound the Nakashes' funds. "We want the court to decide on the dividends as soon as possible," Schauer said.

The Nakashes' attorney, Dan Woods, filed a request for a preliminary injunction last week prohibiting Guess from withholding any future dividends and directing it to distribute the Nov. 25 dividend. Paul Marciano, a spokesman for Guess, said, "This was not a move by the Marcianos but upon corporate advice by the corporate attorneys. The decision to withhold dividends from the Nakashes came because there is a dispute about the validity of the shares of the Nakashes. We believe they are not entitled to any distributions, and it's within the corporate duties to impound the distribution of shareholders who are in dispute. Our shares have never been in dispute."

Woods will attempt to get a summary judgment throwing out the Marcianos' claims. He summarizes the overall legal dispute: "The Nakashes bought 50 per cent of Guess for $5 million in 1983 and the company is obviously worth much more today, probably around $400 million. They (the Marcianos) are trying to cancel the deal and get back $200 million worth of a company that they were paid $5 million for."

Japanese Traders Worried Over Proposed Sales Tax

By TSUKASA FURUKAWA

TOKYO (FNS) — Japanese retailers and other traders handling consumer products are increasingly worried about a serious impact the proposed 5 per cent sales tax may have on their business if the current tax proposal, as expected, becomes law.

It was stressed, however, that the sales tax is not an import tariff, and the tax plan does not mean any new tax on imported goods when they are cleared through Japanese customs.

LUNCH FOR TWO AT THE PIERRE: The men's wear industry took over the Fifth Avenue hotel when the clothing and neckwear markets both held their annual award lunches in adjoining ballrooms. The SRO crowd at the United Jewish Appeal-Federation function heard holocaust author and teacher ELIE WIESEL set the mood, fabric importer HERB DREXLER collect the bucks and honoree DAVID PINCUS exclaim, "If you're not really involved, try it!"

Neckwear guests were led by a sign inviting them to the "neckware" luncheon, which didn't confuse most executives, and they also had to walk past the UJA party, which temporarily did mix up a few invitees. But the Neckwear Association of America's Ninth Annual Achievement Awards luncheon was well orchestrated. The association's president, JEROME B. MYERS, also president of Rooster, Inc., took advantage of this year's Statue of Liberty birthday spirit to note that three of the four honorees were immigrants—MERVYN MANDELBAUM, president of Superba, MICHAEL STEINBERG, president of Sanger-Harris, and JEAN P. BAER, president of Raxon Fabrics. The other honoree was RON ALEXANDER, Lifestyle reporter for the New York Times. Mandelbaum worked in his father's neckwear business in his native South Africa for 15 years before coming to Superba. "In South Africa we always said only in America can these successes happen, and how true," Mandelbaum said to an audience that included his parents. Steinberg showed his bottom-line retail instincts by thanking the neckwear industry for profits, noting that "anything today which gives you a 50-per-cent-plus margin has got to be the greatest thing in the world." Alexander, who was credited with helping the yellow tie business with one of his New York Times articles, said the yellow tie he was wearing was the one he owned without the stain.

FANFARE FOR FORD: The designer was clearly dazzled. FORD BECKMAN, whose neckwear and sportswear lines are having their debut for Wemco, Inc., (formerly Wembley Industries), is possibly seeing more retail executives during market week than in the last few years combined. And at Wemco's party Tuesday evening at the Time & Life Building, he mixed with more than 300 retailers. Those guests saw models displaying his sportswear collection, Resilio Sport, as well as Wemco executives and waiters wearing Ford Beckman ties. "I've never been in this price range with my couture lines, so I've never dealt with department stores like this," he told BTL, as models paraded by showing his Hawaiian antique print poplin shirts and his signature cable varsity sweater. "We've had so many appointments and this is serious volume, and it's very exciting." Other Wemco hosts at the party (also thrown to celebrate the corporate name change) were SIDNEY PULITZER, chairman, ARTHUR PULITZER, president, and AL ANDREWS, president of Resilio Sport. Wemco executives were easy to spot, most of them wearing Ford's candy cane tie. Ford wore one of his sweaters without a tie.

Weiler, Belfer events with Rabin produce outstanding results

Israel Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin was the principal speaker at two major New York events in May with Jack D. Weiler and Arthur Belfer, both of which were held in conjunction with the gala Israel Bond international dinner, to take place on June 1, launching a year-long celebration of the Centennial of David Ben-Gurion, Israel's founder and first Prime Minister.

Mr. Rabin appeared at a private luncheon for Mr. Weiler hosted by Sy Syms at the Regency Hotel in Manhattan, and at a private dinner for Mr. Belfer hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Resnick at the Harmonie Club in New York.

Outstanding Israel Bond results were produced for Israel's economy at both advance functions.

Brig. Gen. (Res.) Yehudah Halevy, president and chief executive officer of the Israel Bond Organization, presented the David Ben-Gurion Award, a sculptured bust of the late Prime Minister, to Mr. Weiler and Mr. Belfer at their respective events.

All-time record of $603 million in Israel Bond sales in 1986 $71-million Greater New York total sets new high for area campaign

A total of $603 million in cash proceeds for Israel's economic development, which represents an increase of $98 million over 1985 results and close to $200 million more than 1984 sales, has been announced by the Israel Bond Organization.

The announcement in New York was made by Jack D. Weiler, international chairman of the Israel Bond President's Club, and Ira Miller, chairman of the Greater New York campaign.

"Of the $603 million worldwide figure," they stated, "a record $71 million in Bond sales was mobilized by all our divisions in the five boroughs of New York City and in Westchester, Nassau and Suffolk Counties, representing an increase of almost $20 million over last year's results in the Greater New York area."

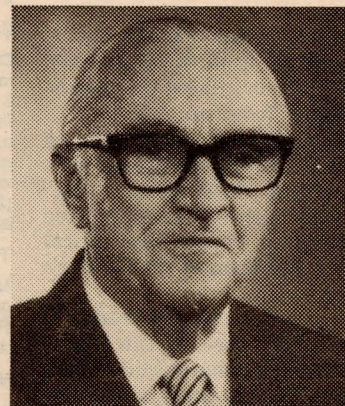

The two Bond leaders described the 1986 accomplishment as "the most productive Bond campaign by far in the 35-year history of our organization."

They declared that the $603 million worldwide response in 1986, which included sales of Israel Bond securities in the United States, Canada, and countries in Western Europe and Latin America, "demonstrated the continuing partnership with Israel by Jewish communities in all the countries where we conduct our Bond effort. In addition, it expresses the confidence of thousands of institutional investors, including banks, pension funds, and employee benefit funds, in Israel's economic future."

The Bond leaders praised the president and chief executive officer of the Bond Organization, Gen. Yehudah Halevy, "who was responsi-

In a cable to Israel Finance Minister Moshe Nissim, campaign leaders joined with General Halevy in "expressing the hope that our outstanding 1986 results will help Israel move forward from the economic stability achieved this year to further new growth."

They added: "On behalf of all the dedicated volunteers who assist us in our efforts, our purchasers and our devoted professional staff, we wish you, Mr. Minister, and the Government success in the coming year in all your efforts to strengthen the economy and to build a happy future for Israel and its people."

In addition to its record Bond sales in 1986, the Bond Organization, in response to a request by the Government of Israel, volunteered to accept an additional task and, under its auspices, a total of 131 delegations, of which 107 were synagogue groups, visited Israel during the past year.

Bronx Soviet Jewry activist recalls 'night that changed my life'

By J.J. GOLDBERG

Avi Weiss, the fiery Bronx rabbi whose globetrotting battles with anti-Semites have earned him legions of fans along with some enemies — and a few bruises along the way — spent a night in jail last week as a guest of the District of Columbia.

Besides fulfilling a legal obligation, his incarceration gave Weiss fresh insight into a people to whom he has devoted years of activism.

"I felt such an emotional sense of connection with Soviet Jewry on an unbelievably high existential level," he said. "Such a sense of just being at one with the oppressed. I mean, [former refusenik] Yosef Mendele-vitch went through that for seven years. I was in for a day."

It wasn't the first time the 42-year-old Soviet Jewry activist had been in a tight spot. Weiss has been spat on in Vienna while protesting the election of Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, locked in maximum-security prison for three days in Geneva during the Reagan-Gorbachev summit and ejected from the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp site in a protest connected with Reagan's Bitburg trip.

But this time was different. The one-day jail term came while Weiss was recovering from a wrenching quadruple bypass surgery last December. The surgery followed a heart attack he suffered in September. That hit him during an altercation after a Soviet folk dance troupe, the Moiseyev Ballet, performed at Lincoln Center.

"That night changed my life," he told an interviewer.

"There was a time when I enjoyed activism. I enjoyed yelling at cops. But I can tell you now, honestly and openly, that I detest activism. I detest being arrested."

In the course of a wide-ranging conversation with The Jewish Week a day after his incarceration, Weiss' tone see-sawed from what appeared to be a drained, almost listless repetition of his firm beliefs on Soviet Jewry, to a somber reflection on his past activities, to a stammering speechlessness when he attempted to describe his experience in jail.

Finally, he turned to a relaxed and animated discussion of current activities at his Riverdale synagogue, which he proudly noted had recently installed an 18-foot ramp to allow handicapped access to the bimah.

Still, he denied that he had any intention of ending his militant activism on behalf of oppressed Jews in the Soviet Union and elsewhere.

"I have no choice," Weiss said of his activities. "But it's very different from years ago, when I kind of liked it. Now I don't like it. It almost killed me."

Weiss' recent stay in jail was the result of a March 1986 protest at which he and two other rabbis were arrested for demonstrating within 500 feet of the Soviet embassy in Washington. The protest was part of a se-

'Haman of the Year'

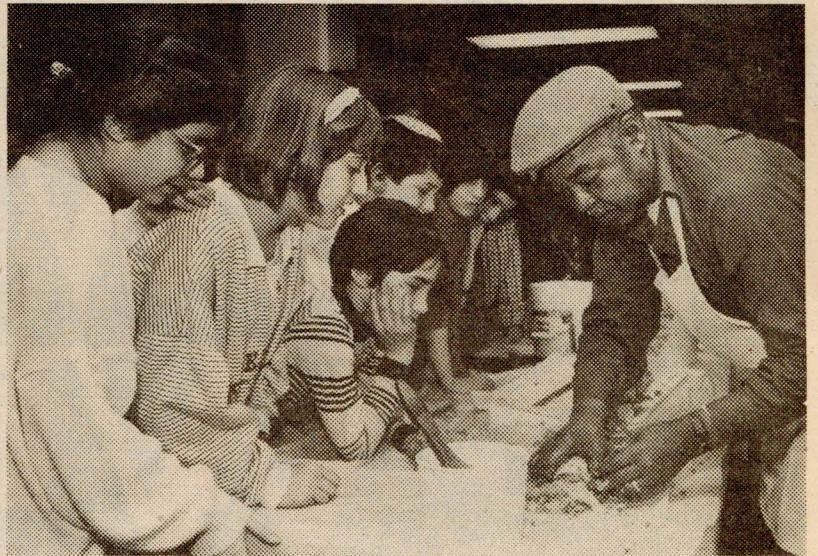

The Jewish community's least-desired honor, the "Haman of the Year Award," was captured this week by a United Nations ambassador judged fitting of the prize named for the infamous anti-Semite of ancient Persia. The honoree is Said Rajaie-Khorassani, permanent representative to the UN of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

The award, which carries no monetary prize and is "coveted in sadistic circles," was announced at the International Council of B'nai Brith's annual UN party. Council Director Harris Schoenberg, whose choice for the award was "arbitrary, prejudiced and final," said the Iranian was cited "for his extraordinary solution to the UN financial crisis."

"In a speech to the General Assembly on Oct. 30, 1986, the Iranian diplomat suggested that the destruction of the Jewish state would help to solve the crisis by removing many money-consuming items from the world body's agenda."

Schoenberg said Rajaie-Khorassani met the award criteria: "You have to have a minimum of viciousness and be irrational and genocidal in pronouncements at the UN."

Big Apple students get strudel tip

Students from JHS 143 in Washington Heights received a tasty break from classwork recently at a workshop sponsored by the Yeshiva University Museum. As part of an intergenerational oral history youth project, students were taught the art of baking apple strudel by Jesse Boone, a baker at Gruenbaum's Kosher Bakery for 40 years.

The six-month project, "Frankfurt on the Hudson: Tracking the German Jewish Presence in Washington Heights," is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The project is designed for students to discover the impact German Jewish emigres have had on the educational, religious, social, cultural and economic life of Washington Heights.

Just back from Dublin, where he and his wife, Rose, attended the bar mitzvah of a nephew, Michael Mann, president of the Loyal League of Yiddish Sons of Erin, told the group's annual St. Patrick's Day luncheon that Irish Jewry, though alive and well, is fast becoming a "historical curiosity." The younger generation of professionals has been leaving. So, Mike said, the number of Irish Jews has shrunk in a few years from 4,000 to 1,400. Those who remain, however, cling to their faith and customs — including wearing top hats at the bimah.

Real estate executive Jack Rudin, host of the gathering for Americans of Irish antecedents, made special note of the upcoming 90th birthday of his mother, May, present and by her own account "still going strong."

Margaret Morse, owner of the Florida-based Margaret Morse Tours, Inc., has received Israel's Ministry of Tourism Medal for the second time. Morse, whose tours are described as "cultural happenings," had never been to Israel before 1980 when a choral and dance group for which she is artistic director was invited to perform there.

$76 million in Bonds for Ben-Gurion finale dinner Andrew Tisch, Burton Resnick of New York receive 1987 Ben-Gurion Centennial Medals

More than $76 million in Israel Bond subscriptions was announced at a gala International Dinner in New York at which Andrew H. Tisch and Burton P. Resnick, two dynamic business and communal leaders in the Greater New York area, were among sixteen prominent world Jewish leaders from three continents who were awarded the 1987 Ben-Gurion Centennial Medal.

The 1987 medalists, representing the second generation of post-World War II Jewish leadership, were honored "for their achievements in philanthropy, business, and efforts for Israel and the community at large."

Some 1,000 Jewish leaders from the United States, Canada, Western Europe and Latin America attended the event, which ended the Bond Organization's year-long observance of the Centennial of the birth of David Ben-Gurion, Israel's founder and first Prime Minister. It was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel, in an address filmed in Jerusalem for the dinner, told the Jewish leaders that "all Israelis, no matter what political view they represent, are united in the search for, and determination to achieve, peace."

The differences among us are in regard to the methods to achieve peace, and such differences are perfectly legitimate in a democratic society."

The 1987 medalists, in addition to Mr. Tisch and Mr. Resnick, were Gary Abramson, Washington, D.C.; Michael M. Adler, Miami; Pierre Aidenbaum, France; David Alliance, United Kingdom; Israel Feldman, Mexico; Steven Grossman, Boston; Martin Levine, Montreal; Richard Pearlstone, Baltimore; Carl M. Rheuban, Los Angeles; Ronald Rubin, Philadelphia; David S. Shapira, Pittsburgh; Jane Sherman, Detroit; Martin Stein, Milwaukee, and Abel Wertheim, Argentina.

The Israel Prime Minister pointed out that the Camp David process "is still the only instance of successful peace negotiations between Israel and the Arab world. It was achieved by means of direct negotiations and the Government of Israel is committed to that procedure."

'Man of Vision'

Mr. Shamir added: "Ben-Gurion was a man of vision, idealism and decision. As we now see, his decision to found the State of Israel Bond Organization was wise. Its fruits have contributed to the development of the State for 36 years — to this very day."

Brig. Gen. (Res.) Yehudah Halevy, President and Chief Executive Officer of the worldwide Israel Bond Organization, praised Ben-Gurion for his accomplishments as a leader in war and peace and called the dinner, which brought to a close the celebration of the Ben-Gurion centenary, "a very significant demonstration of Jewish unity with Israel. Israel will draw new strength and new encouragement from this magnificent response."

"The leaders we honor are in the best tradition of 'acharai,' which is a 'must' for every officer in the Israel Defense Forces. It means 'follow me.' It means that an officer is out in front of his unit, leading his men. This is the essence of leadership."

Farewell Tribute

A highlight of the event was a special farewell tribute to Meir Rosenne, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, for his four years of service in this country.

Ambassador Rosenne presented this year's Ben-Gurion Centennial Medals to the 16 national and international Jewish leaders who were honored at the dinner.

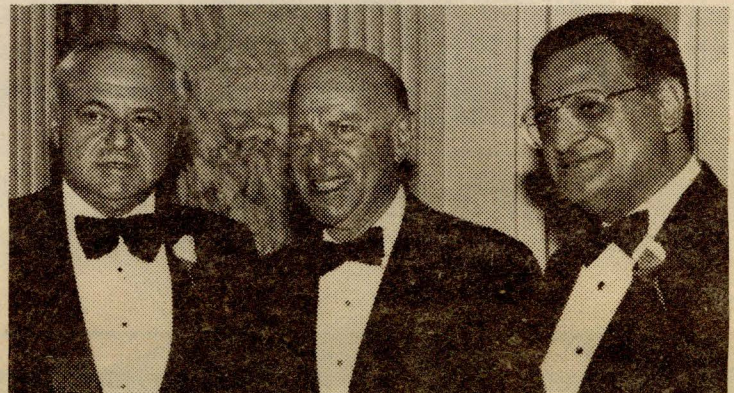

David B. Hermelin of Detroit, International Chairman of the Israel Bond Organization, served as chairman of the dinner. Other Bond leaders who participated in the evening's program were Jack D. Weiler of New York, International Chairman of the President's Club; William Belzberg, National Chairman; Susan Weikers, National Women's Division Chairman, and Sy Syms, Greater New York Chairman of the President's Club.

Former U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain Walter H. Annenberg of Philadelphia and Mr. Weiler, who were among the 1986 medal recipients, were Co-Chairmen of the dinner committee.

East End celebration

LONDON—From Daniel Mendoza, known as the "father of scientific boxing" and British champion for 20 years, to Moses Montefiore, the centenarian who virtually invented modern philosophy, the Jewish personalities and places of this great city will be celebrated in a summer-long program of special events.

Visitors to London during June, July and August will find the East End, core of Jewish life in England for 200 years, bursting with exhibits, concerts, theater performances, lectures, walking tours and religious services.

Among the exhibits will be the first major show since 1961 of sculpture and drawings by Jacob Epstein; the Judaica Collection from the Victoria and Albert Museum; "Daughters of the Pale," the writings and photographs of immigrant women at the turn of the century, and a display prepared by the Museum of the Jewish East End on the Yiddish theater in London.

THE LONDON JEWISH Male Choir, augmented by the choir of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, will offer a pageant on the Jewish experience in England from 1066, when a small band of merchants settled here after the Conquest, to the present, when the community numbers more than 400,000. Additionally, there will be performances of secular music by the BBC Concert Orchestra and of religious music at various East End synagogues.

Bagels, lox and nostalgia will be served at a dinner-and-show performance of traditional Yiddish theater at the Bishopsgate Institute, and Arnold Wesker's modern classic, "Chicken Soup with Barley," will be enacted at the Half Moon Theater, evoking 1930s Depression years in the East End.

William Frankel, former editor of the London Jewish Chronicle, which recently celebrated its 150th birthday, will talk on "Shtiebel Memories." There will also be lectures on umbrella- and furniture-making—two uniquely Jewish crafts in the East End—and on the Jews of London as seen through Victorian eyes.

Guided walks will bring visitors through ghetto alleys, the old Cockney quarter, Petticoat Lane, Shoreditch and Stepney Green—areas in which the hordes of refugees from Czarist Russia established themselves. Their synagogues—the Settlement, Sandy's Row, the Hackney and the 18th-century Bevis Marks—will conduct special services and readings from the works of East End poets and playwrights.

The full program of the East End celebration is available from Helen Carpenter, Tower Hamlets Environment Trust, 192-6 Hanbury St., London E-1 5-HU; telephone (in London) 377-0481. Information is also available from the British Tourist Authority, 40 W. 57th St., New York, NY 10019; (212) 581-4700. Package tours of Jewish London have been organized by the American Jewish Congress, 15 W. 84th St., New York, NY 10028, (212) 879-4588; Keshet Kosher Tours, 1501 Broadway, New York, NY 10036, (212) 921-7740; and Congregation Machane Chodosh, 67-29 108th St., Forest Hills, NY 11375, (718) 544-9383.

ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL in Paris, the Centre Rachi is offering a wide range of summer courses for university students (and/or their parents) in both Judaism and the Hebrew language and in French culture and the French language. There are two three-week sessions, the first from July 5 to Aug. 1 and the second from Aug. 2 through 29.

There are daily courses in French (for beginners, intermediate or advanced), lectures on French civilization and a range of Hebrew and Jewish studies. In addition, there are workshops, cultural activities, walking and sightseeing tours of Paris and its environs and outings at which the students—the community center attracts registrants from all over the world—have the opportunity to meet fellow Jews.

Accommodations are provided at the nearby Paris University, and kosher meals are available either in the center's restaurant or at other kosher establishments (of which there are many) throughout Paris. Information is available from Albert Kadouche, director of the center, 30 Blvd. de Port-Royal, 75005 Paris; local telephone: 331-9820/336-2194.

Commentary

Lisa's life and death

By Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum

(Copyright 1987, Jewish Telegraphic Agency, Inc.)

The tragic death in New York of Lisa Steinberg, the 6-year-old victim of apparent child-beating, has wrung the hearts of all of us. It has made us aware of how urgent is the need to strengthen the capacities of social service agencies and the police to contain this growing family violence before it destroys more innocent lives.

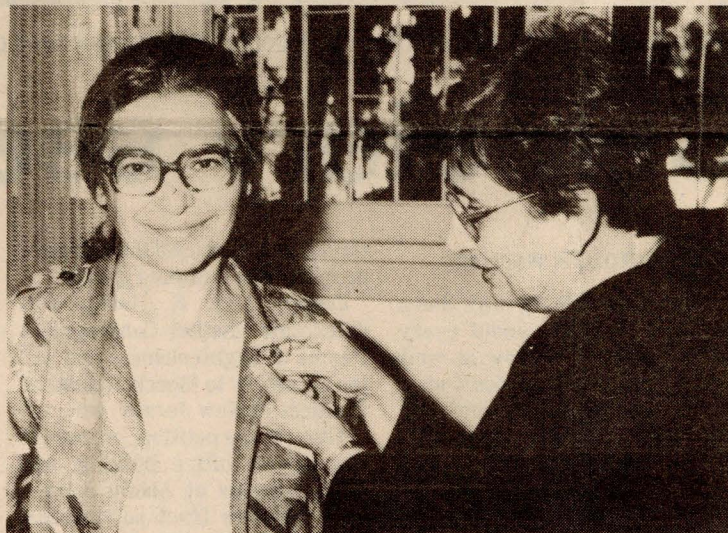

But there is one aspect of this tragedy that needs to be set straight before it gets out of hand. It was reported that Lisa was born of Catholic parents and had "a Jewish upbringing." Lisa indeed was born of a Catholic mother. The notion, however, that she had a "Jewish upbringing" is nothing less than scandalous.

The beatings and abuse that this poor, lovely child suffered at the hands of her adoptive parents, who were born Jewish, violates every basic teaching of Judaism about children. Anyone who knows anything about the Jewish religion and real Jewish family life knows that every child is sacred and central in Judaism. The child in Jewish tradition is the highest of human treasures. What her parents inflicted on Lisa was savage, not Jewish.

Equally, the battering of the woman in Lisa's household, Hedda Nussbaum, abuses every Jewish teaching and feeling about the honored place of a wife in the strong Jewish family tradition. "Husbands must honor their wives more than themselves," the Talmud declares.

Beyond that, this is not a Catholic-Jewish issue. It is a terrible human tragedy. And all of us should be doing everything we can together to try to prevent Lisa Steinbergs and Hedda Nussbaums of whatever religions and races from ever happening again.

Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum is director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee.

The Nov. 20 article announcing the election of Joanne Skemer as co-chairperson of the Jewish Community Center of Yonkers incorrectly printed a byline by Mrs. Skemer which implied that she had written the article herself. This was obviously not the case and the Chronicle regrets the error. We again congratulate Mrs. Skemer in her new position.

Shamir supports National V.R.I. Campaign, lauds Bond leaders 'for helping our economy'

Israel Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir helped launch the Israel Bond Organization's month-long national and Greater New York campaigns for the sale of the new Israel Variable Rate Issue Bond last Sunday, wishing the participants "success in the new campaign, which could help us to advance towards economic stability and growth."

Addressing Jewish leaders in 60 communities throughout the United States and Canada, Mr. Shamir, speaking from Washington, D.C. during a nation-wide telephone conference emanating from New York, lauded the leaders of Israel Bonds for their "devoted efforts" which, he said, "have helped us improve our economy. We are grateful for what you have done."

Others who participated in the telephone conference were Sy Syms of New York, incoming 1988 U.S. National Chairman of Israel Bonds; Yehudah Halevy, Israel Bond President and CEO, and Saul Volchok, National Chairman of the Prime Minister's Club, who is chairing the national VRI campaign.

Chase Manhattan Bank honored CEO accepts Israel 40th Anniversary Medal

The Chase Manhattan Bank was honored this week with the first Israel 40th Anniversary Medal for its service to the State of Israel as fiscal agent for Israel Bonds since 1951 at a luncheon in New York attended by 200 community and business leaders.

Willard C. Butcher, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, who accepted the award on behalf of the Bank, pointed to the "three miracles" which were associated with the occasion.

The first, he said, is "the very existence of Israel, of which you and our country can be justly proud not only of Israel's economic development but of its democracy."

The second miracle, he said, is

"the tremendous number of friends" Israel has gained in non-Jewish communities in the United States and throughout the free world.

And, finally, he added, the third miracle is "the Israel Bond campaign," which he praised for "its ability to organize in so short a period of time after Israel achieved its independence in 1948." He called it "the most successful campaign of its kind ever launched."

He added: "The Bond Organization has done a remarkable job, registering $8.5 billion in sales — not only in the United States but in Europe and Latin America as well."

The 200 guests who attended the luncheon at The Pierre hotel included Greater New York Jewish community leaders, representatives of the State of Israel and prominent New York business leaders.

Jews live in Syria, where they are "oppressed and their move- ment is limited"; the remainder are in small Jewish communities throughout the Arab world.

He pointed out that Israel has failed to emphasize during all these years that more Jews left and were expelled from the Arab countries than the 600,000 Pal- estinian refugees who lost their homes and fled from Israel in 1948.

"We have to stress that what really happened in reality is an exchange of population between Jews of Arab countries and Palestinian refugees," Hillel said.

ISRAEL BOND NEWS

Rabin helps mobilize $18 million for Israel on 'Cash Sunday'

Israel Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin was the principal speaker at a "Cash Sunday" Luncheon last week at which more than 200 Israel Bond chairmen and leaders in metropolitan New York mobilized $18 million for Israel's economic development. Reporting personally to Mr. Rabin on their divisional and regional campaigns, the Bond leaders brought checks for cash payments of Bonds for presentation to the Defense Minister. Ambassador Ronald S. Lauder (photo at right, top), former United States envoy to Austria, participated in the program, which was held at the Plaza Hotel. David B. Hermelin, International Campaign Chairman; Sy Syms, incoming U.S. National Chairman, and Yehudah Halevy, Israel Bond President and CEO, welcomed Minister Rabin and took part in the check presentation ceremony. Shown above (photo at left) are Marian Gross and Steven Schneier (second and third from left), Metropolitan New Leadership Chairpersons, presenting their division's cash mobilization checks to Mr. Rabin. Looking on are Chairmen Hermelin and Syms (right). In center photo above, Howard Hirsch (right), Real Estate Prime Minister's Club Chairman, hands his division's checks to the former Prime Minister in the presence of Gen. Halevy. Philip Cohen of Integrated Resources (photo at right, bottom) greets Minister Rabin after presenting his company's check.

Rechler tribute nets record $6 million

Donald Rechler, president of the Long Island real estate development firm of Reckson Associates, was the recipient of the Israel Peace Medal at a dinner-dance in his honor sponsored by the Long Island Real Estate, Builders and Allied Industries Division of Israel Bonds. Mr. Rechler is shown with Ruth and Jack Wexler, members of the President's Club, the Bond Organization's most prestigious honor society, who presented the award to their nephew at the dinner. The event, which produced over $6 million in development capital for the State of Israel, was attended by almost 600 persons at the Garden City Hotel, Garden City, N.Y., setting an Israel Bond sales record on Long Island and an attendance record for the hotel. Co-chairmen (not shown) were Wilbur F. Breslin, Jay J. Raddock and Jerry Spiegel, with Gilbert Tilles as honorary executive chairman and Robert DiFazio as executive chairman.

Rabbinic Cabinet to meet in Israel

More than 110 Rabbis from the Greater New York area and all parts of the United States and Canada will meet in Israel from January 3-8 for a conference of the Israel Bond National Rabbinic Cabinet that will mark Israel's 40th Anniversary Year "and demonstrate our solidarity with the people of Israel at this vital period in its history," according to Rabbi Stanley M. Davids, National Rabbinic Cabinet Chairman and Senior Rabbi of Central Synagogue in Manhattan.

"It is important to be in Israel now to let its citizens know that the world Jewish community is with them in this historic 40th year of their country's independence," Rabbi Davids stated.

One of the principal purposes of the Conference, Rabbi Davids noted, "will be to develop ways and means to increase tourism and the number of North American synagogue delegations to Israel, which is so vital to its economic development."

Rabbis attending the Conference will have the opportunity to meet with Israel's top government officials and leaders, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, President Chaim Herzog, Finance Minister Moshe Nissim, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and others. Minister of Tourism and Justice Avraham Sharir will be Conference host. The Rabbinic Mission was organized by the Israel Bond Organization, the Israel Government Ministry of Tourism and El Al Israel Airlines in a special effort to promote tourism to Israel among North American Jewry.

The film image, man tells YLC

when the sun came up we had them cornered in a large building.

"We had no idea what part of the country we were in, until an old man told us the building was the school auditorium in Ma'alot. The terrorists had had the good fortune to stumble into a building filled with children — ready-made hostages who found themselves trapped."

The 1974 terrorist incident at Ma'alot, in which several children were killed, made a lasting impression on Svoray.

"All day, we waited, listening to the screams of the children who were inside the building and the crying and yelling of the parents and media who were gathered outside, waiting for something to happen," he said.

"When the order came to storm the building I had a sick sense of dread. I knew that I would come face to face with the monsters who had killed these children. We broke down the door ready to open fire, sure that we would be killed by the terrorists, and found that the monster was a 16-year-old boy in a Coca Cola T-shirt who was trying to reload his machine gun.

"He, too, was killed. That is the reality of terrorism."

The YLC Chai Division is open to contributors of $1,800 and more to the 1988 FAJA campaign. Stuart Appel, Susanna E. Lachs, Stuart Conston and Seth J. Lehr are co-chairmen of the division. Barry Bernstein and Arnold New are vice chairmen of the YLC FAJA campaign. Mitchell Klevan is YLC chairman and Andrew Rothseid is YLC chairman-designate.
