THE BREAD OF AFFLICTION -- THE WINE OF FREEDOM
A Passover Sermon

by

DR. ABBA HILLEL SILVER

The Seder Table, dear friends, reminds one of a sort of a mosaic of beautiful symbols. Each object on the Seder Table, each dish, each special food, is symbolic and cumulatively, they tell the whole story of the meaning of Passover.

The two most dramatic symbols on the Seder Table, side by side, are the Matzah and the wine, symbols of slavery and of freedom. The Matzah is called by our people the _____ the bread of poverty, or in Aramaic, _____ the bread of affliction. In the very beginning of the Seder ritual the head of the household lifts up the Matzah, displays it, and says _____ this is the bread of affliction the _____ that our forefathers ate in the land of Egypt.

Now freedom is symbolized at our Seder Table by the four cups of wine which are prescribed as part of the Seder ritual; each cup, you will recall, commemorating the mention of the word emancipation or freedom or redemption which occurs in the Bible in the Book of Exodus where the story of the going forth out of Egypt is told. The wine of course has always been the symbol of joy and of happiness _____ _____ wine makes glad the heart of man, just as the Matzah, the poor, dry, unleavened bread is the symbol of want and deprivation and poverty and servitude. And these two powerful symbols are found side by side on the Seder Table. They constitute not alone the principal ingredients of this ritual, but they constitute also, when you come to reflect upon it, the chief ingredients of the total life of man and of the total life of nations.

Men in their prosperity oftentimes are prone to forget the poor years and the lean years and they are prone to turn their backs upon their friends and associates of their early days of struggle and of painful climbing. They do not want to remember, when the wine is red and the spirits are high, they do not want to remember and do not want to be reminded of the _____ (only) the bread of poverty which was their lot in the earlier days, some of them. They become hard and proud and self-centered and refuse to be concerned with those who still have not reached the time of the wine of prosperity and are still eating, with tears, the _____ the bread of affliction.

On the other hand there are others who in the darkness of their lives and in their adversity are prone to despair altogether of a better day. They are never destined, they are persuaded, to enjoy the wine of a happier lot in life - they are forever lost and defeated.

Now the Seder Table and the Seder ritual aims to summon all men to contemplate the real facts of human experience. In all lives there is the _____ the bread of affliction, of deprivation, of want and there is also the _____ the cup of salvation. Both have their uses and neither should be lost sight of. In times of prosperity men and women should remember that what was may ^{yet} ~~not~~ be again - that the wheel of fate has a way of turning sharply, unpredictably - that in times of want and sorrow and adversity, men should always remember that there is a _____ a cup of salvation. Men should never lose the undying hope of a better day to come. And the Jewish people, our people, was early taught this lesson, this combined lesson, the obverse and reverse of the one eternal truth. _____

"Remember that thou wast a slave once - never forget it - and remember also when thou wilt pass through the waters I will be with thee and through the fires they will not overcome thee." _____ Do not be afraid.

Our Bible repeatedly refers to the story of Egypt. It is amazing how often this event is referred to in the Books of the Bible -- as if it could not be emphasized enough. The very first words of the Ten Commandments, "I am the Lord Thy God Who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage". The God of Israel is constantly referred to as _____

Who brought you forth out of the land of Egypt

and Who redeemed
you - thee from the house of bondage.

And many of the commandments of the Bible - both ceremonial commandments and the highest ethical commandments are recommended to the people and their observance urged on the ground of their boundened gratitude to God Who set them free from slavery. "I came, therefore _____ I command thee _____ to do this thing. And the importance of the Exodus event was not limited to the generation which it had actually set free. It was to extend to all future generations - to generations not yet born - to all the unseen reaches of time and of history. "In every generation" you read in the Haggadah, "in every generation a man is duty-bound to think of himself as if he himself was redeemed from Egypt". Now why? Why is it so important to remember that event - for all times - for everyman - everywhere? Why is all this emphasis placed upon the Exodus from Egypt? Because, my dear friends, there are great lessons to be learned from that immortal drama of slavery and freedom. In fact, not great lessons, but the greatest of lessons which everyman, every generation must learn if they are ever to pass from the bread of affliction - to the wine of freedom - from darkness to light - from sorrow to joy.

And to three of these essential and indispensable lessons to be derived from the story of Egypt - to three of these stories, the Bible itself clearly and forcibly draws our attention, three lessons which we might well relearn today, and everyday in fact, - first, that slavery is evil! Even where the prevalent social conditions of the times are such that slavery could not be immediately eradicated, as was the case in the ancient world where slavery was of the very pattern of the fabric of the social and economic life of all peoples. And remember that slavery continued into the 19th Century in this - our country - and that only a Civil War, a bloody Civil War, finally abolished it... Even where slavery could not be immediately eradicated, the Bible prescribes that the minimal human rights of the slave had to be respected. The ancient world treated the slave as a beast of burden. Read their literature. Judaism prescribed that the slave be treated as a human being! The noblest minds of the Greeks, not only accepted slavery but justified slavery -- not as an economic necessity, but as a law of nature, as a law of their Gods. There is no justification or defense of slavery in the Bible. The greatest of the Greeks, Aristotle, spoke of a slave as _____ "a tool possessed of life" - nothing more. He is a tool, to be used, to be abused, to be broken, to be cast aside -- a tool, and nothing more! Judaism spoke of a slave as a human being, a child of God.

The ancient world knew of many frightful uprisings of slaves which were most brutally suppressed - like the uprising of Spartacus and Eunus and Trypho. Jewish history knows not of a single uprising of slaves, first, because the number of slaves was always very insignificant, very small, among the Jewish people, and secondly, because ~~they~~ treatment, regulated by custom and by law, was never so severe as to cause slaves to desperate rebellion - to drive them to it.

Anyone who caused a physical injury to his slave, according to Jewish law, whether the slave be Jew or non-Jew, was forced to set him free and anyone who killed a slave was himself put to death. The slave, like the master, and the members of his family, was to enjoy one day of rest every week - the Sabbath Day, and if for any reason whatsoever a slave escaped and sought sanctuary, the Bible prescribed, "You shall not give him to his master -- he shall dwell with you - in your midst - in the place which he shall choose within one of your towns - where it pleases him best - you shall not oppress him." The runaway slave was never to be returned to his master. Having been slaves themselves (and this is the point) of the whole story of the Exodus) having been slaves themselves, our people knew, and they were admonished never to forget, the evil, the indignity, the wrong, of servitude and serfdom. And this amazing law of the Bible is incomprehensible unless you understand this profound truth which our people took to its heart soon after they had left the land of slavery where they had dwelt for four hundred years under the lash of taskmasters. The Bible prescribes: "If a slave plainly says, 'I love my master, my wife, and my children, I do not want to go out free' when his term of servitude was over; then his master shall bring him before the Judges and he shall bring him to the door, or to the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall then serve for life." And the famous Rabbi Jochanan ben Zakkai asked, "Why was the ear singled out from all the other limbs of the body?" The Holy One, Blessed be He, said: "This ear, which heard my voice at Mount Sinai when I proclaimed: 'For unto Me the children of Israel are servants; they are not servants unto servants' yet this man went and acquired a master for himself for life -- let his ear be bored!"

And so this bread of affliction which our forefathers ate as slaves in the land of Egypt, taught them to understand the bread of affliction which all men, in all ages, eat, in tears and humiliation when they are enslaved. It taught them compassion - it taught them humanity - it taught them basic human equality. So that when you come across a passage - a sentiment - such as one finds in the book of Job (and listen closely to this sentiment of Job): "If I have rejected the cause of my man-servant and my maid-servant when they brought a complaint against me; What then shall I do when God rises up; When He makes inquiry, what shall I answer Him?" Did not He Who made me in the womb, make him? And did not One fashion us in the womb?" The slave and the master - both the same handiwork of God! and both, therefore, entitled to the protection of the one universal moral law of God!

And when one comes upon such exalted sentiments of basic human equality you may know where they originated. They originated in a tremendous soul-searching, overwhelming experience of our race - early in its history - which was then resolutely and convincingly and determinedly interpreted for it by its prophets and its sages. And so this was the first lesson learned from the bread of affliction — hatred of slavery -- hatred of all chains which enshackle human beings and deny them their basic human rights.

And a second lesson to be learned from the Exodus, which the Bible wants us to learn, and tells us to learn -- and never to forget -- was that it was our duty to respect the rights of the stranger, the rights of the alien. There are 36 instances in the Bible where these rights of the stranger and the alien -- that is the non-Jew living in Israel -- are referred to. Thirty six times. Few laws in the Bible are stressed more often. And all these are summed up in the all-embracing ordinance:

There shall be only one law

For you and for the stranger in the land. You shall have but only one statute both for the sojourner and for the native-born.

But not only one law-- the Bible is not satisfied merely with a legal prescription. It reaches down into the souls of men! Into their motives and emotions to ensure that this law should be observed. Not only does the Bible legislate against discrimination, but _____ you shall love the stranger. Why?

_____ because you were strangers in the land of Egypt. Among no people is it written in its sacred books that their God is an _____ one who loves the stranger. We experienced in our own day - you and I - the horrible ~~is~~ xenophobia - the hatred of strangers - of the Nazis and the racists who have maintained and proclaimed to the world that anyone who is not of your race and of your blood and of your ancestry is to be degraded and exploited and destroyed! The cultured Greeks of ancient times called those not of their ancient blood "Barbaroi" - peoples who are fit -- justly so -- to be conquered and to be enslaved. Our Bible prescribed, nearly three thousand years ago,

if a stranger happens to live with you,

the _____ in your land _____

you shall not oppress him.

And so the bread of affliction which our forefathers ate as strangers in Egypt taught them a great lesson - helped them to understand the soul of the stranger - the soul of the newcomer - of the minority member - of the homeless in all climes, in all ages -- taught them brotherhood. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us all? Why then should we deal treacherously one with another? That lesson our forefathers learned in Egypt -- and never forgot it. And if so many of the fine sons and daughters of our people through the ages - and today - fought and are fighting for brotherhood and tolerance and the rights of all men, and the rights of minorities, they unconsciously are drawing their inspiration from the deep sources of their racial experience, going way back into the slave pens of Pharaoh in Egypt.

And finally, dear friends, they learned a third lesson - the lesson of Freedom, the love of Freedom, the hunger for Freedom: What one must do to preserve it. Not only is this love of human liberty expressed in such legislation of the Bible as the Jubilee Year but in every fiftieth year the Shofar was sounded throughout the land and every slave had to be set free automatically and all land which had been alienated had to return to the original owners so that no one should remain permanently impoverished because a poor man is a slave.

Israel never accepted in silence throughout its history the despotic absolute rule which/so characteristic of ancient Egyptian monarchs or Asiatic rulers. Kings were deified in the ancient world. Judaism rejected all ideas of King-worship. Kings too were subject to the same moral law as the commoner and this democratic ideal powerfully influenced every phase of Jewish life and society. And any unwarranted exercise of authority, whether on the part of Kings or Priests was certain to counter the fierce resistance of a freedom-loving people which learned how precious freedom can be, early in its history. When Hitler declared that democracy is fundamentally Jewish, not Germanic, he was stating a fact and it is not at all accidental that these same Nazis who made such a violent attack upon basic human rights - attacked even with greater violence, the Bible and the essential teachings of Judaism. Love of Freedom. At the beginning of the Seder Service, when this Matzah is lifted up; "This is the bread of affliction which our father's ate in the land of Egypt"-- that beautiful prayer concludes with the words: _____

"Now we may be slaves"

_____ "next year, please God, may we all be free".

Right on the Seder Table - occupying the most prominent position, is the _____ the cup of the Prophet Elijah -- the harbinger of the Messiah -- the forerunner of the great day of universal reconciliation when all forms of slavery will be abolished and all wrong cease to be, and the Kingdom of God will have been established upon earth. The love of Freedom.

Today, our people, most everywhere is fortunate to drink the wine of Freedom. Today the Jewish people is celebrating, in the land of Israel, the 10th Anniversary of its national freedom. And it is good that there be celebration and joy, because there has been so much of the _____ the bread of affliction in our history.

But as we partake of the joys of and the deep satisfactions of free men and women let us also remember those who are not yet free, whether of our own kith or kin, or of others -- people still groaning under the taskmasters of one form or another, in one part of the world or another -- let us not forget them. Just as in times of suffering we were admonished 'never to forget' _____ the cup of salvation, the Messianic day, the bright day which is to come.

And therefore, let us thank God, as we look upon these symbols of the Passover for all the lessons which it brings to us -- and the challenge to live up to and for the great ethical and spiritual teachings of our immortal faith.

Amen.

- i) Slavery and Freedom as symbols - ^{Egg object} drawn typically by abolitionists in the 1830 service, Passover.
- Slavery is symbolized by the ^{host} D^r called the 1st E.P.
the bread & poverty or affliction. At the very opening of the 1830 service it is lifted up and displayed to the celebrants - ^{Passover 1830 16th April 1830 1st E.P.}
- The joy of Freedom is symbolized by the 4 cups of wine - which are prescribed for the 1830 ritual - each cup commemorative by way of a toast - the ^{occasional repetition of} term "redemption" deliverance, emancipation ~~was~~ ^{which comes} in the Bill in connection with the Exodus from Egypt.
- Wine, & corns, is the symbol for joy and happiness /
C.N.E.U.P.R.L. - just as the 23d - poor, sick and unfortunate - ^{is the symbol for deprivation want and misery.}
^{The two sides of the properties} Both the ^{signs} of the ~~clergy~~ in evidence of the 1830 ritual
- just as they constitute the ~~clergy~~ instrument is the Bill, ^{and} men and nature. ^(add)
2. Our Bill repeatedly refers to the story of Egypt as if it could not emphasize it enough! ^(The first words)
as law was given in Egypt -
- The God, Israel is constantly referred to as ^{passing} 1830
- Many of the commandments - both ceremonial and ethical - are ^{reinforced} before the people and then always urged on the ground of their bounded practicality & ^{for} God who set them free from slavery - IBN, 250 p 5

252 223 v 16 N.Y.

The importance of the ^{Exodus} event was not limited to the generation which was actually set free. It extended to all future generations, ~~not~~ to generations yet unborn into all the ages reverber of time and history.

"In every generation Psh 221D - "

~~Because~~ Why? Because there are great lessons to be learnt from that ^{unparallel} drama of Slavery and Freedom - in fact the greatest - which every man and every generation must learn - if they are to pass from the bond of affliction to the wine of freedom - from darkness to light - from sorrow to joy.

3. There are essential and indispendable lessons to be derived from the Exodus - the Bible itself clearly and forcibly draws attention.

① Slavery is evil! Even where the present social conditions are such that it ~~cannot~~ be impossible, abolished - as was the case in the ancient world when slavery was, the very patterns of the social and even fabric of the unusual human rights, the slave had to be respected.

② The ancient world treated the slave as a beast of burden. Judaism presented that he be treated as a human being). — The nobler minds among the Greeks fought⁽³⁾ slavery - not as econ. necessity but as a law of nature. There is no justification or defense of slavery in the Bkts. Aristotle called a slave - ὄργανον έμπορον - "a tool possessed of life" - that's all.

The ancient world knew of many ^{frightful} usages of slaves which were most brutally suppressed - like those of Spartans, Carians and Tryphos. Search his history ^{WRHS} know, no such usages - just because the number of slaves was always very small - and savagely because their treatment regulated by custom and law - we were to serve as a tool to discipline rebels.

Any one who caused a physical injury to his slave was forbidden to set him free - Any one who killed his slave was himself put to death. The slave hit the master and his family, up to 200 ^{on day 6} weeks first: If, for any reason, a slave escaped and sought sanctuary; "you shall not give him to his master - he shall dwell with you - in your midst - in the place which he shall choose within our ^{your} boundaries it pleases him best - you shall not grieve him"

Having been slaves themselves - they knew - and they (4) were commanded never to forget the evils - the hardships - I repeat.

"If a slave plainly says, 'I lost my master, my wife, and my children, I will not go out free; then his master will bring him before the judges - And he shall bring him to the don - or the ~~despot~~; and his master shall burn his ear ~~thigh~~ with an ~~awl~~; and he shall then serve for life!" - The famous R. Johanan b. Zakkai -

"Why was the ear severed from all other heirs, the body? - The Hegon, blessed be He, said: This ear, which heard my voice as mount Sinai when I prokned: 'For unto me the children of Israel are servants; they are my servants - and not servants to me! - Yet their Master went and agreed a work for himself - at his ear be bored!'

And so the bread of affliction which an forefather ate as slaves in the land of Egypt taught them to understand the bread of affliction which all others men - in all ages - eat - in heat and humiliation - When thy are enslaved - If taught them compassion and humanity -

So that when you come across such sentiments
as are found in the book of Job -

"If I have rejected the cause of my slave and my wife - servant

when they brought a complaint against me.
 What then shall I do when God rises up?
 When He makes inquiry, what shall I answer Him?
Did not He who made me in the womb make him?
And did not One forsake us in the womb?"

- when we came across that 4xalts sentiment / basic human equality - You may know where they originated - in a temple and one whatever elsewhere, the race - last in the history - which has been beneficent - whatever - and convinced interpreted for it by its prophet and sage -

4). A second lesson of the Exodus - was the duty to respect the right, the stranger and the alien. There are 36 instances in the Bible where the right, the stranger = the non-Jew in Israel are referred to. They all are summed up in the one all-encompassing ordinance - Exodus 22:21 Exodus 23:9 Deuteronomy 10:19 Leviticus 19:34 - "You shall have one statute - both for the sojourner and for the native" -

But w/ only one law - no discrimination! - but even fair principles - No partiality
 - Exodus 22:20 - "Lover the sojourner - the those -

5). We experienced in our day the terrible Karphos of the ⁽⁶⁾ Nazis - the rauts - "any one who is not (you) an ace-man black - you are worthy - is to be exploited - degraded - destroyed -- "Barbaroi" — fit — robbed — 23. grk 212 21
— Lex 111 111 —

6). And so the brutal, Affekim - which are brothers etc.
as strangers in Egypt - helped them to understand to and to the strangers - the new-comers — the university-awake.
the timbers - on all ages - Brotherhood ^{10/2} 3rd 11c 21c
10/2 11 321 130 - 15/22 3rd 11 10/2 — 130 11 10/2

7). And the 3rd lesson is the lesson of Freedom: the loss of Freedom - the hunger for Freedom — the a fulfilling year was ordained in ancient Israel - when freedom was proclaimed that the land cuts off the whale tails there —

Slaves were automatically emancipated Land which had been alienated returned to the original owner - so that none be impoverished —
for there is no freedom in want and poverty —
Israel never accepted in unless the despotic, absolute rule which was no better than of ancient Asiatic and Egyptian monarchs. Kings were despised in avout and - Judaism rejected all other they-ports.

They too were subject to one, universal moral law - The democratic ideal triumphed over every effort. / If. Any unreasonable exercise of authority was certain to encounter the fierce resistances, the people -

(Hillis) - "Democracy is fundamentally Jewish - not Germanic - not accidental - violent attack on the Bible and as the essential teaching of Judaism.

8). And this happy Freedom - sustained them - in the long dark centuries - when they had no freedom:

Daniel Jeremy Silver

"Institutions that have been invited to membership in the Foundation, but have not yet acted on the plan or still have it under study, include Church of the Covenant, Cleveland Area Heart Society, Cleveland Museum of Natural History, Epworth-Methodist Church, Garden Center of Greater Cleveland, Holy Rosary Catholic Church and Western Reserve Historical Society.

"Midst of the fact that laudable aims often go astray if they are too vague, the University Circle Planning Committee urged that acceptance of the plan by the various institutions be made as specific as possible. This recommendation led to a document entitled "Implications of Acceptance". This recommendation amounted to an agreement that each member institution would follow the recommended pattern of land use

—acquire new land through a centralized agency

—deal with government agencies on a unified basis in matters affecting the area

—take a unified approach to the parking problem, with as much joint usage of parking facilities as is possible

—present all building plans to a central review board for recommendations and comment

—take other measures to help the plan progress.
