Dear Friends:

In this sacred moment in your lives, what shall I say to you dear friends, in this most sacred hour of your lives?
Shall I give you counsel and advice; surely those nearest and dearest to you with the abundance of their life's experiences have done given and shall in the future continue to give them to you. Shall I dwell upon the grandeur and the glory, This day upon ~~the~~ its wonderful prospects and promises, upon its sanctity and holiness?

You feel these emotions more intensely than ever I can hope to picture them to you.
I shall, ~~to~~ ^{can} but speak to you, first, as a ~~for~~ one would speak, out of the fullness of his heart, ~~or~~ when two of his ^{dear} friends are about to seek mutual consecration ~~and the fulfillment of~~ in the holy bond of matrimony.
You are facing the dawn of a new day. A new world of infinite beauty lies before you. Strengthened and inspired by your mutual love you set out to reach the goal of your hopes and dreams.

May the blessing of our Father who is the source of all spiritual love hover over your lives like a sweet benediction. May he ~~be the flower of many suppers~~ ~~surrounded~~ ^{fill} your path and may he ~~be the~~ ^{fill} the cup of your life, especially with the weeks of happiness.

The message which I, as Rabbi, would bring to you in this supreme moment, is this: When God created first just created man alone - "In the great problems which will beset your way dear friends remember that you will solve them so much more successfully if you will be the helpmate of each other - let each of you complement the life of the other. Let each be the golden note that harmoniously will blend into the symphony of your being - Be one in love, in faith, in hope.
