GREETINGS FROM OUR FOUNDER

Thirteen years ago, it was my privilege to attend the founding of the Jewish Teachers Association and I have watched with pride its growth in strength and importance.

Worth, however, is not determined by time but by vision, sentiments, and noble endeavor. By that test you stand among the elect; you are transmuting the commonplace offerings of life into the gold of social achievement.

With eyes of faith, let us not fail to see the rainbow of a fine prophecy, that while striving in the service of the good, you are bound for the better, and destined for the best.

Cordially yours,

OSWALD SCHLOCKOW

On Our Thirteenth Birthday

The platitudes generally expressed concerning graduation versus commencement apply as well to Bar Mitzvah as the celebration of the ending of a period in the life of a Jewish boy versus the dedication of the newly born youth to a life of service to God and man. Platitudes are vitalized, however, into significant realities by Jewish youths who continue to grow intellectually, morally, and spiritually. Similarly, institutions and organizations which have vital force continue to change from year to year—to grow in scope and in effectiveness.

The Jewish Teachers Association has certainly changed to a remarkable extent in the thirteen years of its existence. Informally, the organization really had its beginning about sixteen years ago, in the group of about thirty Jewish supervisors who gathered in the Chambers of the late Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, in order to discuss two questions. The first was the problem of the increasing juvenile delinquency that had come to the official attention of the judge. The second was the relation of this problem to religious education of boys and girls. It was assumed by all present that if the delinquents could have been given the proper kind of religious training in their earlier years, a large number of them might not have developed the anti-social tendencies and activities, which brought them into our courts of law.

It was, therefore, decided to form an organization for the purpose of promoting the religious and moral education of boys and girls. Nothing came, however, of the tentative organization that was set up in Judge Rosalsky's office, and the writer, who had been among those present, was just about beginning to discuss the matter with some fellow Jewish supervisors, when another meeting was held—thirteen years ago—at which the present Jewish Teachers Association was definitely formed. This time, another jurist influenced action—Judge Mitchell May—and a third question was added to the two that had been discussed at the earlier meeting—the subject of philanthropy. Specifically, ways and means of cooperating with the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies were discussed. The other two questions of juvenile delinquency and religious education were in the foreground, however, so that the Constitution stated the first objective of the newly formed organization to be: "To promote the religious, social and ethical welfare of children."

From the beginning, however, the Jewish Teachers Association conceived the scope of its activities in promoting the religious education of children to lie wholly outside of the public schools. The members always bore in mind that primarily they were teachers and supervisors in a public school system, which was at the same time the fruition and the bulwark of a democratic form of political organization. They had a keen appreciation of their heritage as Americans, of a school system which was completely free from sectarian religious entanglements. They were committed to the proposition that the welfare of our democracy demanded that this complete separation of sectarianism from our secular schools for all the children of all the people be continued. Hence, when the question of some form of what has now come to be known as "released time" for religious education was first presented to the Jewish Teachers Association, about eight years ago, by the sister organizations of the other two faiths, there was unanimous determination to oppose any such linking up of our public schools with sectarianism.

The question kept coming up year after year and the Jewish Teachers Association remained firm—and grew to memberships of 1,000, 2,000, and 3,000. At the end of the school year 1938-1939 we numbered about 3,100. Now, in the middle of the school year 1939-1940, we have already enrolled 3,300 members—and there is half a year in which to grow. Moreover, the struggle against "released time" which the Jewish Teachers Association waged alone for many years, has in the last year attracted a number of other organizations, which have awakened to the dangers and subversive influences that are sure to flow from an invasion of our free, democratic, tolerant public schools by sectarianism with all its possible bigotries and intolerance. The Jewish Teachers Association rededicates itself, in its Bar Mitzvah celebration, to the promotion of the religious, social and ethical welfare of children and to the proposition that the scope of this promotion is to lie wholly outside of the public schools.

Meanwhile, another change occurred at the beginning of the school year 1938-1939. The Jewish Teachers Community Chest was formed to take over all the philanthropic activities of the Jewish Teachers Association, and of its directors and members acting as individuals in the various campaigns for funds that have been held during the past thirteen years. The new organization functioned effectively from the start and is giving promise of even more successful achievement in the future. This has freed the Jewish Teachers Association so that it can give its entire attention to the actualization of its four constitutional objectives. On the occasion of our Bar Mitzvah, we hope that the vital force which has been responsible for our growth in effectiveness as a power for good, will continue to expand and to become more intense and productive. We pledge to work harder than ever for

1. "the promotion of the religious, social and ethical welfare of Jewish children"
2. "the development of a social spirit among the Jewish teachers of this city"
3. "the enhancement of Jewish and other humanitarian endeavor"
4. "the elevation of the standards of integrity, honor and courtesy in the teaching profession."

We pledge again to help safeguard our democracy and our democratic public schools by opposing, to the best of our ability, all attempted invasions by any manifestation of sectarianism. We look forward to growth in scope and in effectiveness—to continued activity in the service of God and man.

Note to Our Guests

The task of seating the unprecedented large number of guests who made reservations this year was a difficult one. We ask the indulgence of all our friends for any inconvenience that may have been caused. We hope that the same spirit which prompted you to subscribe to this luncheon will cause you to overlook any error or omission on our part.
