Why do all present-day enemies of human liberties persecute religion? Because religion in its spiritual essence is their death warrant. They see in Judaism and Christianity the last unwearied watchmen over the ramparts of human liberties who must be destroyed before their own freedom-annihilating materialistic revolutions can be firmly established. They must eradicate the entire complex of ethical and spiritual ideas, rooted in the principle of the sacredness of human personality, the worth of the individual, the transcendent moral law and method of human progress which are at the very heart of the Judeo-Christian civilization.

Thoughtful men are coming to understand that mankind's surest way to freedom is the way which leads forward to God. They have come to understand that faith in God is the strongest bulwark of a free society. Human freedom began when men became conscious that over and above society and nature there is a God Who created them, Who breathed His spirit into them, Who fashioned them after His likeness, and that they are, therefore, possessed of intrinsic and independent significance, and are endowed as individuals with original and irrevocable rights and authority. Men became free when they acknowledged a higher authority than that of state, class, system or ruler.

Friends of democracy have somehow forgotten the religious origin of the whole democratic dogma in the modern world. They have forgotten that political freedom came to the Western world as a result of the long struggle for religious freedom, and not vice-versa. Every important social and economic movement in ^{Western} Europe in the last few centuries was inspired by the Judeo-Christian ethical idealism. Modern democracy was born in the struggle for religious freedom in the 16th and 17th centuries. The demand for spiritual freedom, emancipated from the shackles of tradition the ecclesiastical dictatorship and grounded in the authority of direct revelation soon expressed itself in demands for other forms of liberty. Political and economic rights were demanded by humble people who quoted the sanctions of the Bible as their authority. All men were equal because God made all men equal. The things which they demanded were the things which the Bible, the revealed word of God, conceded to them and to all men.

The thinking of the Founding Fathers of the American Republic was greatly influenced by the religious ideas of many of the sects which sprang up in the wake of the Protestant Reformation. Some of these sects were hundreds of years ahead of their time. They held that the state had no right to circumscribe the freedom of the individual. They held that the duty of the state was only to protect the good and to punish the evil, and beyond that, the state itself was evil. They demanded the absolute separation of church and state. They preached universal toleration and freedom of worship. They maintained that all property belonged to God. Some of them, like the early Christians, practiced voluntary communism which is a very different thing from the secular, involuntary, materialistic communism of our day; in fact, it is violent negation in everything but name.

Thus, out of the victories won for religious freedom on the battlefields of the spirit, there stemmed other victories for man's political, economic and social freedom. When the Founding Fathers wrote into the Declaration of Independence: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness", they were giving political expression to these seminal religious doctrines. When they proclaimed that resistance to tyrants is obedience to God, when they engraved upon the Liberty Bell the Biblical proclamation, "And thou shalt proclaim freedom throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof", and when they placed on the first seal of the new-born Republic of the United States the figure of Moses leading the children of Israel out of Egypt, they were marshalling religious truth, authority and tradition to underwrite their political revolution. The American Revolution kindled its torch at the flame of the religious dogma. The long protracted struggle in our country to emancipate the slaves likewise received its powerful momentum not from economic or any materialistic conception of history, but from profound and dynamic religious convictions which revolted against the enslavement of human beings who are the children of God, and which heard in the tramp of men marching to battle the very footsteps to God - "His truth is marching on."

Democracy shrivels when its religious source dries up. An early and friendly critic of American democracy, De Tocqueville, cautioned: "Despotism may govern without faith, but liberty cannot."

There is a real danger that the whole continent of ideals which we associate with Judaism and Christianity may drop out of our world and be sunk like some lost Atlantis - the unalienable rights of man, the inviolability of the individual, the freedom of the human mind, the right of dissent, tolerance, brotherhood, equality, peace. In many parts of the world these ideals are already regarded as black heresy and treason. Elsewhere they are still tolerated, but regarded as something of an annoyance and considerably in the way.

In a world divided, as ours is into two distinct and hostile camps, there is the danger that even the democratic camp, in the process of mobilizing itself militarily for what it has been led to believe is the irrepressible struggle will come to adopt the same technique of violent regimentation and suppression of basic human freedoms which it is charged those behind the so-called Iron Curtain have already adopted. Freedom will be sacrificed in a crusade to preserve it.
