Invocation, visit of Eisenhower to Case, 1961.

Our kind Father in heaven,
Upon all who are gathered here we invoke Thy blessing.

Bless Thou this institution of learning and all who labor here, and on its behalf to extend the frontiers of science and to transmit to each succeeding generation the growing store of human knowledge.

May Case School go from strength to strength, matching every need of our unfolding life. May it carry on in ever-widening effectiveness ~~the~~ <sup>the mission</sup> ministry of learning and teaching which is man's supreme enterprise on earth, outlasting all changing systems and ~~resisting all~~ <sup>the most</sup> ~~obstructions.~~ <sup>formidable obstacles.</sup> <sup>overcoming</sup>

Heavenly Father, we sorely need the steady light of Thy truth in these turbulent times and in this riven world. Grant us increasing reverence for the things of the spirit, lest the things of the mind alone lead us to the wilderness of despair and calamity. Give us the vision and courage to build for justice and brotherhood, so that our nation's future may be as glorious as the dream of those who founded it.

Bless Thou our beloved guest of this evening, the former Chief Executive of our nation and the captain of the free world in its perilous hour -- Dwight D. Eisenhower -- who has come to share with us his <sup>of the hosts</sup> ~~views~~ <sup>thoughts</sup> and his insights. May the words of his mouth guide us in our thinking and inspire us in our action.

Amen.

During the past fifteen years Case faculty and administration have conducted a series of intensive studies resulting in a set of educational imperatives which will guide us as we move carefully but decisively to accept our obligations as a national institution of higher learning. General Eisenhower's visit and his remarks will, I hope, underscore the national needs against which Case's plans for increasing its national leadership can be measured.
